Quick Price, Wage Curbs Opposed by Symington

Much Higher Taxes, Other Devices May Avert Need, Says Mobilization Head

By Alfred Friendly
Post Reporter

Mobilization Director W. Stuart Symington argued long and earnestly yesterday against the over-hasty application of general wage and price controls.

His thesis was that other anti-inflationary devices—credit curbs and, most important, much higher taxes—should be pushed to the utmost. If that is done, he said, "there is still a possibility" of avoiding "the great complexity and difficulty of over-all price and wage controls."

Symington's views were contained in an extensive, copyrighted interview in the weekly magazine, U. S. News and World Report.

The chairman of the National Security Resources Board argued that although the defense situation required great effort and set into operation serious inflationary pressures, the diversion of production to military use "cannot be compared to that in an all-out war effort."

No Indefinite Straitjacket

Therefore, he said, we "should not put the whole economy into a straitjacket for an indefinite period of time . . . This is particularly true of price and wage controls . . . If economic controls are pushed too far ahead of the military build-up, they will hurt the economy without serving a useful purpose."

The proportion of national production going into military uses is "not high enough to justify at this stage the complete system of controls that we had in 1944, when the military 'take' was practically half of the total output of the economy," he said.

If wage and price ceilings have to be imposed on a general, overall basis, Symington continued, it will be because the other measures—credit curbs and higher taxes—have not been pushed hard enough, or because business or labor, or both, "have taken advantage of the defense situation to raise prices or wages."

Symington conceded that no matter what was done, prices would rise somewhat. There is no way of adding a large defense program to an already tight, prosperous economy, he said, without prices and wages rising a notch, or "even several notches." The real problem, is not to let them rise so many notches as to cause serious difficulty, he stated.

He said he thought some important prices had already begun to stabilize.

A number, however, did not. Among others, there were these announcements yesterday of increased prices:

Botany Mills increased the

H. L. Mencken, 70, Is Gravely Ill In Johns Hopkins

BALTIMORE, Oct. 16 (AP).—H. L. Mencken, author, critic and newspaperman, is gravely ill in Johns Hopkins Hospital, it was learned tonight.

The 70-year-old "Sage of Baltimore" suffered a severe heart attack last Thursday.

A hospital spokesman said he is being treated for "acute complications of a chronic vascular condition."

Baby's Furniture Turns Into Cash Through Post Ad

One of the laments of mothers and fathers is that baby furniture can't keep pace with baby's growth.

Many smart parents solve the problem by turning outgrown furniture into cash through Post want ads.

In the past month Post ads have sold cribs, carriages, high chairs, strollers, bathinettes, etc. that were in good condition but no longer useful to their owners.

If you have child's furniture that's outlived its usefulness, don't waste valuable storage space keeping it. Instead, sell it rapidly and easily through a Post ad. All it takes is a call to NAtional 4200.

Court to Pass On Legality Of Va. Poll Tax

Special Tribunal Designated to Study Its Constitutionality

RICHMOND, Va., Oct. 16 (AP).—A special three-judge Federal tribunal will pass on the constitutionality of Virginia's poll tax laws.

Chief Judge John J. Parker of the United States Fourth Circuit Court of Appeals designated the court today in an action implementing the Appellate Court's reversal of the Alexandria District Court in the case.

The District Court had refused to request such a tribunal to hear the suit in which Mrs. Jessie Butler, 55, Halls Hill, Arlington County, Negro, sought to compel Mary A. Thompson, county registrar, and six other State election officials to register her without payment of the tax.

In designating the three-member court, Judge Parker did not indicate when or where the court would meet to hear the case. However, the plaintiff had demanded she be permitted to register without payment of poll taxes to vote in the November 7 elections.

Members of the court are Circuit Judge Armistead M. Dobie of Charlottesville, District Judge Sterling Hutcheson of Boydton, and Judge Albert V. Bryan, who had dismissed the case in Alexandria District Court.

In its opinion reversing the District Court, the Appeals Court noted the Butler case repeated allegations in a case before the court three years ago. The court dismissed that action as moot; the election was held before the appeal was perfected. However, at that time the court had said:

"The complaint and offers of proof raise questions of the gravest character, which, if presented in a case properly before us, would merit our most careful consideration."

The allegations include charges that:

Poll tax provisions of the State constitution were intended to disfranchise Negroes; as many as 50,000 Virginians, qualified otherwise, are prevented from voting in the Eighth Congressional District because of the poll tax laws.

High Court Voids Florida 'Golf' Decision

State Told to Study Earlier Ruling as Guide to Race Policy

By Chalmers M. Roberts
Post Reporter

The Supreme Court yesterday tossed back to Florida one of its segregation problems—the use of Miami's municipal golf courses—with some hints on how to handle it.

In a one-sentence order, the high court knocked out a Florida Supreme Court ruling against a Negro who had protested the city's Mondays-only policy for his race on the links. Then it told that State court to reconsider the case "in the light of" last June's two unanimous Supreme Court rulings against segregation in university graduate schools.

There is nothing in those decisions, of course, about golf courses. But there is, for example, a statement that the Constitution requires an opportunity for Negroes to have an education "equivalent to that offered by the State to students of other races." Texas was that particular State and the argument then was over admission to its all-white law school. The student was subsequently admitted.

Florida Must Seek Way Out

Now Florida's highest State court will have to read the June decisions (handed down after the State court had acted in the golf course case) and try to find a way out. When a new State ruling is issued, the Supreme Court may consider it.

But at this point, the court apparently wants to have Florida find a solution itself within the general confines of Supreme Court injunctions that facilities for Negroes must at least be "substantially equal." That might mean a new course for Negroes alone, or time divided 50-50 or even an end to segregated golf, as is the case now in the District of Columbia.

One interpretation of yesterday's action by the Supreme Court in sending the case back to Florida is that the court wants to let its decisions of last June "seep down" before taking any further steps against segregation.

In another action the court

Plea for Rate Boost Looms

Million-Dollar Yearly Rise Seen In Gas Co. Operating Costs

A Washington Gas Light Co. official last night said company costs may be increased as much as one million dollars a year, following hearings opened yesterday before the Federal Power Commission.

A cost boost of this size would "unquestionably" mean an appeal to the Public Utilities Commission and the possibility of an increased consumer rate, the official stated.

This would be in addition to the $750,000 rate increase granted the company by the Public Utilities Commission last year and set aside by District Court Judge T. Alan Goldsborough. The company is now appealing the decision.

The increase now before the courts would add 24 cents to the average home bill, now about $3.31.

The FPC hearing is reviewing the rate structure of the Atlantic Seaboard Co. and the Virginia Gas Transmission Corp. Atlantic Seaboard supplies the Washington Gas Light Co.

Atlantic Seaboard filed a tariff last April to bring its charges to the Washington company in line with later consumers, in order to absorb the cost of operating a new pipeline. Atlantic Seaboard figured the new tariff would cost Washington Gas Light $400,000 more per year. Later in the week, Washington Gas Light attorneys will try to convince the FPC that the new tariff actually would mean an unjustified million-dollar increase.

Parcel Post Rate Boosts Are Sought

Donaldson Uses Old Law in Move to Add $105 Million a Year To Department Cash

By The Associated Press

Steps to increase parcel post rates 105 million dollars a year have been taken by Postmaster General Donaldson, it was disclosed yesterday.

Invoking a little-used statute, the Postmaster General has gone to the Interstate Commerce Commission for a rate boost which the present Congress has thus far refused to give him.

The disclosure that proceedings have been started came from the ICC, to which Donaldson appealed last week for prompt action.

The Postmaster General acted under a 1925 law which provides two methods for changing parcel post rates—one by act of Congress, the other by action of the Postmaster General with ICC assent.

The proposed changes would increase the mailing charge for the first pound from four to nine cents, depending on the postal zone. Additional poundage rates would be increased by a fraction of a cent to three cents per pound.

Fourth Class Mail

Parcel post, in general, covers fourth class mail including catalogs and similar printed advertising matter in pound form.

For catalogs, Donaldson asked increases of 2.5 cents per pound on the first pound for local delivery, and three cents per pound on the first pound for all out-of-town zones. The proposed jump on additional poundage would range from one-half cent to five cents per pound.

The Postmaster General also proposed a special surcharge for parcel post packages of such size and weight as to make it necessary to handle them outside of mail bags. He asked for a 50-cent surcharge on parcels over 50 pounds, and a 25-cent surcharge on less than 50 pounds requiring handling outside mail bags.

The proposal would not disturb the special rates now extended to books for the blind, and for loan library books.

Obtained by Brown

The last time a Postmaster General went to the ICC for a parcel post increase was in 1930 by Postmaster General Walter F. Brown. He obtained approval after a two-year proceeding before the commission.

Parcel post rates were last increased January 1, 1949.

Donaldson has pressed this Congress for substantial increases in second and third-class mail, and also parcel post. A bill which does not fully meet his request has passed the House but has been hung up in the Senate.

Donaldson said the changes are required to meet the continuing deficit in his department, which has been running around 500 million dollars a year. He told the ICC a similar deficit is in prospect this year.

French Minister Flies Home, Taking Suggestions for Trimming Deficit

By Ferdinand Kuhn
Post Reporter

Jules Moch, the French Minister of Defense, flew home yesterday, taking with him American "suggestions" for trimming the expected deficit in the French defense budget.

Defense Secretary George C. Marshall went to the airport to wish his French colleague a good flight. Moch plans to return here for 12-nation defense meetings on October 28, after facing a critical debate on rearmament in the National Assembly.

A French official who knows his P. G. Wodehouse, and who knows his Defense Minister's state of mind, said Moch wasn't at all disgruntled over his treatment here, but wasn't gruntled either.

The American "suggestions" will mean a hurried recasting of the defense budget which Moch must present to his parliament this month. They will involve cutting or postponing several big items of expense without slowing down the pace of French rearmament.

10 Divisions if U. S. Aids

The French have said they are ready to put 10 divisions into Germany by the end of next year if they can get an estimated 770 million dollars of American financing in addition to more than two billion dollars worth of American weapons which they hope to obtain under the military assistance program.

One big item which could be trimmed, in the American view, is the proposed construction of four aircraft carriers and several hundred carrier fighters. Another is the proposed large-scale production of a new 13-ton tank which, the Americans believe, has not yet been adequately tested and will take an inordinately long time to produce.

Another economy could be achieved, the Americans think, by using Italian factories to make more jeeps and trucks for the combined western defense army, and still another by putting fully trained but partially equipped French divisions into the field next year.

Moch has agreed to study these ideas, and to see whether they would bring the French deficit down to an amount which the United States could finance.

U. S. Not Rejecting Plan

One thing was made clear to the French ministers at these talks: the United States is not rejecting the French defense plans in general, and has not refused to do what is needed to help.

In American eyes, France and Norway are outstanding among all the North Atlantic Treaty countries for their determined efforts to increase their defense budgets. American officials have nothing but admiration for the spirit the French government has shown—especially since France will have to furnish the largest share of the ground forces of a combined army.

Miami Sheriff Is Suspended After Crime Quiz Indictment

Illinois Racing Board Moves to Weed Out Undesirable Workers

CHICAGO, Oct. 16 (AP).—Disclosure that a former associate of Al Capone was employed at Sportsman's Park race track in suburban Cicero brought quick action today from the Illinois Racing Board.

The board ordered William H. Johnston, Sportsman's president, to fire Robert (Big Bob) McCullough, 58, of Cedar Lake, Ind. In addition, the board directed Joseph P. Broderick, board secretary, to examine the race track's payroll records for names of any other men the board may consider undesirable.

McCullough, questioned last week in the slaying of former Police Lieut. William Drury, in the past has occupied the position of "police chief" at Sportsman's Park and the Miami (Fla.) Kennel Club, also owned by Johnston.

Questioned by investigators for the United States Senate Crime Investigating Committee, McCullough said he had made threats against Drury for statements Drury had made about McCullough in a Miami radio broadcast several months ago.

But he denied knowledge of the slaying, saying "somebody beat me to it." Johnston said the rac-

Law Officer Accused By Rackets Jury of Condoning Gambling

MIAMI, Fla., Oct. 16 (AP).—Sheriff James A. Sullivan was charged with condoning gambling and corruption in an indictment that quickly led to his suspension today.

Under the indictment the sheriff cannot be prosecuted in court, as this action amounts to a public censure. Special grand jury counsel Robert H. Givens explained that the charges of incompetency and neglect of duty "are for the Governor."

Before nightfall Gov. Fuller Warren suspended Sullivan, as he had said he would if the sheriff were indicted. A former Miami High School football coach, Jesse H. Yarborough, a Dade County commissioner, was named sheriff until the 1951 Legislature acts on the suspension.

The sheriff was charged with permitting unbridled gambling in Dade County, the principal cities of which are Miami and Miami Beach. The indictment alleges he used the power of his office to permit Harry Russell to muscle into the giant S & G bookmaking syndicate of Miami Beach and allowed his deputies to coerce gambling houses, keep money seized

Reply to Dewey Stand

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower yesterday left the way wide open for a Republican movement to draft him for the presidential nomination in 1952.

A two-paragraph statement, issued by Eisenhower in New York voiced pride in his present post as president of Columbia University.

But "Ike" failed to stop with a flat "NO" the GOP presidential boom touched off for him Sunday by Gov. Thomas E. Dewey of New York.

Said the World War II military commander:

"Any American would be complimented by the knowledge that any other American considered him qualified to fill the most important post in our country. In this case, the compliment comes from a man who is Governor of a great State and who has devoted many years of his life to public service. So, of course, I am grateful for Governor Dewey's good opinion of me.

Convictions Unchanged

"As for myself, my convictions as to the place and methods through which I can best contribute something to the cause of freedom have often been expressed. They have not changed. Here at Columbia University I have a task that would excite the pride and challenge the qualifications and strength of any man—I still believe it offers to such an individual as myself rich opportunities for serving America."

Though he didn't say "yes," the statement fell far short of the bald refusal he has given previous presidential feelers.

In a letter to Leonard V. Finder, publisher of the Manchester, N. H., Evening leader on January 23, 1948, Eisenhower, then Army Chief of Staff, said he was "not available for and could not accept nomination to high political office."

In the same letter he expressed the conviction that life-long professional soldiers should abstain

'Wrong Approach'

NEW DELHI, Oct. 16 (AP).—Prime Minister Nehru, in a major statement of India's policy, today opposed the American-supported plan for United Nations military forces, on the ground it would turn the U. N. toward war rather than peace. He also strongly opposed American policy toward Communist China.

Nehru said the idea of U.N. armed forces to combat aggression, substance of a seven-nation proposal now being debated, was "a wrong approach."

"It seemed like converting the United Nations into a larger edition of the Atlantic Pact and making it a war organization more than one devoted to international peace," the prime minister said.

Nehru also:

1. Blamed much of the woes of Asia today upon the fact that Communist China has been kept out of the United Nations. Calling this an "astounding phenomenon," he added that any foreign policy based upon nonrecognition of the "new China" is "wrong and leads to unreal and imaginary results."

2. Declared that India feels the problem of combatting Communist expansion fundamentally "is a problem of winning the understanding and good will of the masses of the world." He said that "unless people have some hope in the future held out to them, they seek other remedies."

3. Said most countries of Asia are developing or wish to develop democratic institutions and "most of them are opposed to totalitarianism as represented either by communism or fascism."

"Given a period of peace, the inner weaknesses of any system will show themselves and there will be a tendency for each country to evolve on lines best suited to its existing conditions and genius," Nehru said.

Nehru deplored the crossing of the thirty-eighth parallel in Korea by U. N. forces without first making a full effort at peaceful solution. He said this involved great risks of conflict on a wider scale, although he acknowledged to a

Prisoner Shot in Hour-Long Gun Fight at Police Station

Barricaded on the second floor of the Groveton, (Va.) police substation, two miles south of Alexandria, a berserk prisoner held off at gunpoint, more than an hour, a dozen State and Fairfax County policemen late last night. The station was wrecked.

He was overcome only after three shotguns blasted away at him as, revolvers in both hands blazing, he suddenly broke from a second floor haven and bolted down the stairs to the main floor.

The prisoner was identified by Lieut. S. A. Walton, of the Virginia State Police, as William H. Proctor, 38, a laborer of 21 Fenton st. n.e.

Walton said Proctor apparently was attempting to commit suicide by leaping in front of trucks on Route 1, near Woodbridge, Va. at 10 p.m. Two State troopers took him to the Groveton station.

While being questioned Proctor ran upstairs to the second floor where guns and ammunition are stored, slamming the door of the room. Then he began shooting through the floor and out of the windows. Police, crouching behind desks, returned the fire.

When State Trooper C. R. Buchanan started up the stairs, Proctor opened the door and the two shot it out briefly, each finally retreating.

The capture came when Proctor dashed downstairs, where Troopers R. E. Godsey, J. E. Hall and P. P. Herndon waited with shotguns. All fired. Proctor, wounded in the chest, went down, still shooting.

Faster Pace Is Forecast; Resistance Grows Less

So. Koreans Closer Than Yanks to Goal; Big Breakthrough Appears Imminent

TOKYO (Tuesday), Oct. 17 (AP).—United Nations forces punched through crumbling North Korean lines Tuesday to within 30 air miles of the Communist capital of Pyongyang at the closest point. A general breakthrough appeared in the making.

United States Eighth Army headquarters reported spectacular gains on all fronts against negligible Red resistance.

AP Correspondent Leif Erickson at Eighth Army headquarters said the United States Twenty-fourth Division had captured Haeju, just north of the thirty-eighth parallel, and then swung northward along a good highway toward Pyongyang.

Aerial observers said — without confirmation — they saw United States Twenty-fourth Division troops 10 miles south of Sariwon, important road junction only 35 miles south of the Red capital.

Advance of 52 Miles

This would represent an advance of 52 road miles since Sunday, when elements of the Twenty-fourth speared into Yonan, just south of the thirty-eighth parallel. At the start of the war it was the Twenty-fourth Division which bought time with blood in a slow and costly retreat.

The United States First Cavalry Division was last reported about 10 miles east of Sariwon on the primary highway to Pyongyang.

On the east coast, the South Korean Capital Division punched within three miles of the big Communist industrial center of Hamhung, one of the last remaining supply points for the rapidly dissolving North Korean forces.

The Capital Division aided by strong naval air support, pushed one column through the highway town of Chigyong to a point within three miles of Hamhung. Another column advanced through Yonpo toward the outskirts of Hungnam, the port for Hamhung. The advances represented gains of 21 to 24 miles in a single day.

Only Small Arms Fire

Opposition to this dual advance only 110 miles south of the Korean-Manchurian border was confined to small arms fire.

The South Korean First Division was closest to Pyongyang. An Eighth Army spokesman reported these Republican troops drove one column 10 miles west of captured Suan to a point 30 air miles southeast of the Communist capital. Another column was three miles northwest of Suan on a secondary road to the communist citadel.

Earlier the First Division's commander, Gen. Paik Sun Yu predicted his men would reach Pyongyang in three days "if everything went as planned."

The South Korean Eighth Division was last reported 50 miles southeast of Pyongyang on the right flank of the fast-moving First Republican Division. The Eighth Division took Koksan after an 18-mile thrust in 12 hours.

Headquarters officials said the push by the Capital Division on Hamhung was "the "big news" of the moment since the city was

French Abandon 4th Fort in Month To Viet Minh

SAIGON, Indo-China, Oct. 16—(AP)—The French have cleared civilians out of the key French frontier stronghold town of Langson, after French forces abandoned still another in their crumbling chain of frontier outposts to the Communist-led Viet Minh forces, a military spokesman announced today.

The military spokesman said all contact has been lost with the rear guard of the French garrison that is withdrawing from Thatkhe. The rear guard consisted of two small companies—about 200 men.

In the past month the French have abandoned the posts of Caobang, Dongkhe, Thatkhe and Nacham. This withdrawal has left some 300 miles of the Chinese frontier wide open to Viet Minh forces.

Truman to Discuss U.S. Policy Tonight

To Stop Reds

Stassen Urges Asia Post For M'Arthur

By the United Press

Harold E. Stassen called on President Truman last night to make Gen. Douglas MacArthur supreme commander of all American military interests in the Far East as proof the Administration really wants to stop Communism in Asia.

In a radio speech over the National Broadcasting Company network, the Pennsylvania University president asserted that if MacArthur's advice had been taken after World War II, China would not now be Communist and there would be no American casualty lists in Korea.

Calling the General the "best informed American" on Asian affairs, he said Mr. Truman's Wake Island conference will prove statesmanlike only if the Chief Executive now accepts MacArthur's advice.

Otherwise, he said, it will have been nothing but a "sinful political escapade," and the American people will say: "For shame."

Copies of Stassen's speech were distributed by the Republican National Committee which, however, disavowed any official backing for the address.

Senator Owen Brewster (R., Me.), chairman of the Republican Senatorial Campaign Committee, told newsmen the national committee had picked Stassen to counter Mr. Truman's foreign policy address at San Francisco today because it considered him the Republican with "most effective" experience in Asian problems.

But a national committee spokesman said Brewster was "misinformed." He said Stassen telephoned GOP headquarters last Saturday and asked assistance in getting radio time.

"We called the networks and got him 15 minutes," the spokesman said. "He is speaking as Stassen, not as a representative of the Republican Party."

The former Minnesota governor made no mention in his speech of his recent letter to Soviet Premier Josef Stalin proposing a Stassen-Stalin conference to settle differences between Russia and the United States.

He hit at what he called Administration "blunders" in Asia and said that ever since World War II the Administration and State Department have "endeavored to undermine and weaken" MacArthur.

The two-time unsuccessful GOP presidential candidate said the one thing the people want to know from Mr. Truman when he speaks today is:

"Will you now accept General MacArthur's advice in Asia and the Western Pacific?" He added that if Mr. Truman is not willing to make such a commitment, he should "explain in detail to the people why not."

Appointment of MacArthur as supreme commander "would immediately make it clear to the Communist rulers in the Kremlin that they could no longer look to profit from the blunders and the weakness of American policy in Asia," he said.

He said no one person could speak for the Republican Party when it is not in power, but he was "confident" the President would get "united, enthusiastic" GOP backing if he gave MacArthur supreme command and followed his advice."

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 16.—President Truman returned to the American mainland this evening after a 12,000-mile Odyssey that took him to Wake Island to meet Gen. Douglas MacArthur.

He is to make an important foreign policy speech Tuesday night at 11:30 Washington time in San Francisco's war memorial Opera House, birthplace of the United Nations.

Mr. Truman, while in Hawaii, promised that in this speech he would "tell the world" what American policy is and how it affects world peace.

The presidential airplane Independence landed at the International Airfield today at 4:58 p.m. after a smooth flight over the Pacific.

Mr. Truman, tanned by the sun at Hawaii and Wake Island, was delighted to find Vice President Alben W. Barkley waiting to greet him. The Veep, now on a 18-State political tour, had flown to San Francisco earlier in the day.

Reaction Called "Very Good"

It was the first time in the city's history that it had been host to a President and a Vice President at the same time.

Mr. Truman and members of his party naturally were anxious to know about the reaction at home to his weekend meeting with Gen. MacArthur. Reporters who went to Wake Island came in earlier on the Pan American Airways Mayflower Clipper and had a chance to interview Barkley.

Asked about reaction at home, the Vice President said:

"I think it has been very good. The people don't know the details of what happened. I think all are convinced that he did the right thing."

A reporter reminded him that there was a suspicion that the trip was "political."

Scoffs at 'Political' Charge

"Senator Wherry," Barkley observed, "said the other day that it was a cheap political trip, but I don't think the people have any such notion about it."

White House Press Secretary Charles G. Ross told reporters tonight that the President hadn't heard about Harold Stassen's comment that "the trip was a sinful political escapade unless the President agreed to accept MacArthur's advice on Far Eastern policy."

Mr. Truman arrived in California in the midst of a red-hot political campaign. He went out of his way to stay out of it on this particular trip. Democratic candidates were barred from his suite in the Fairmont.

"Will he see Jimmy and Helen?" a reporter asked Secretary Ross.

"He has no political appointments whatever," Ross said and he won't make any."

James Roosevelt, eldest son of the late President, is running for Governor against the Republican incumbent, Earl Warren. Representative Helen Gahagan Douglas, Democrat, is battling Representative Richard Nixon, Republican, for the Senate seat vacated by Sheridan Downey.

"Non-Political" Address

Mr. Truman was so determined to keep tomorrow night's speech in a non-political atmosphere that he sent two of his aides to San Francisco to supervise the arrangements.

White House Secretary Matthew J. Connelly and Administrative Assistant Donald S. Dawson have been here ever since Mr. Truman started across the Pacific to meet General MacArthur.

They set up a bipartisan committee to issue invitations, distribute tickets and arrange the seating at the Opera House tomorrow night.

Mayor Elmer E. Robinson, a Republican, will introduce Mr. Truman Tuesday night when he speaks from the stage he occupied in 1945 when the United Nations was born.

Gov. Earl Warren and Mrs. Warren will occupy a box. Boxes also have been set aside for members of the California delegation in Congress.

The arrangements committee was at the airfield this afternoon to greet President Truman. They were Mayor Robinson, Paul A. Bissinger, president of the San Francisco Chamber of Commerce, and George R. Killion, president of the American Presidents line.

In his hotel suite, Mr. Truman had dinner with his staff and then went to work on Tuesday night's speech. He is expected to devote a part of it to his meeting with General MacArthur, but the bulk of it will have to do with the Administration's program for world peace.

Mayor Robinson arranged to have the opening of "The Magic Flute" at the Open House delayed a night so as to accommodate the Chief Executive.

Hanley Letter Tells of Reward to Give Way to Dewey

ALBANY, N. Y., Oct. 16 (AP).—Lieut. Gov. Joe R. Hanley, today released a letter in which he told a friend that "if I will consent to take the nomination to the United States Senate, I am definitely assured of being able to clean up my financial obligations within 90 days"

Hanley called a conference to deny "absolute falsehoods" he said were being circulated against him.

The letter was dated September 5, the day before Hanley consented to become the Republican nominee for Senator to oppose Democrat Herbert H. Lehman, the incumbent in the November 7 election.

Democratic headquarters in New York city said the letter had been addressed to Representative W. Kingsland Macy of Suffolk County.

The letter read:

"Today I had a conference with the governor in which certain unalterable and unquestionably definite propositions were made to me.

"If I will consent to take the nomination to the United States Senate, I am definitely assured of being able to clean up my financial obligations within 90 days, so that I would be clear for the first time in 20 years of my life.

"I am assured of an adequate living compensation if elected, in a perfectly legal and unquestionable way. Also I have an ironclad unbreakable arrangement whereby I will be given a job with the State which I would like and enjoy (I have been told what it is) at sufficient compensation to make my net income more than I now have.

"This removes all the gamble from the picture and will enable me to face the future with confidence and the knowledge that, even if I lost my eyesight, I would still have a comfortable living and be able to do the duties evolving upon me.

"After long and painful deliberation and in consultation with my whole family, I have reached the conclusion that I cannot afford to gamble with my future, as things now are. Therefore, tomorrow morning I am going to announce that, if the delegates will nominate me for the office of United States Senator, I will accept.

"I am not talking with you because, to be perfectly honest and frank, I have neither the courage nor the strength to do so.

"I feel very deeply that I have somehow let you all down and perhaps I have. If you feel bitter, I can understand why, but I can assure you that within a short time you will receive from me every cent that I owe you, and at least you will not lose that part of the investment.

"I shall always think of you with nothing but admiration and love. You and Mr. Gannett have been wonderful and the only bright spot in the whole terrible picture is that I shall be able, within a reasonable time, to pay you both in full.

"I am humiliated, disappointed and heartsick, but in fairness to myself, to you to whom I am indebted, and to my family I can do nothing else. Please try to see this in the fairest light possible.

On Sept. 2, Hanley announced that he had withdrawn as a candidate, and urged Gov. Thomas E. Dewey to seek reelection.

Dewey announced on September 4 he would seek a third term. On September 5, the day before the Republican State convention at Saratoga Springs, Hanley conferred here with Dewey. The next day Hanley announced he had agreed to become his party's nominee for United States Senator.

The lieutenant governor said it was insinuated that Dewey had promised him a State job if he were defeated by Lehman.

"That's one of those half-truths," Hanley said.

He said he told Dewey that if he were defeated he might have to ask the governor for a job but that Dewey replied that the State would not "want to lose you from State service."

The lieutenant governor said that where he wrote that if he went to the Senae "I could be assured of additional compensation" he meant he would be eligible for a State pension of about $7000 a year, in addition to his salary as a Senator.

Hanley said that the source of the money he expected in 90 days was an insurance policy that was to mature at about that time.

In Rochester, Frank E. Gannett, newspaper publisher, acknowledged that he was the "Mr. Gannett" mentioned in the letter.

Gannett said he had loaned Hanley "some money for pre-convention expenses."

Eisenhower Leaves Way Open For Presidential Draft in 1952

from high political office "in the absence of some obvious and overriding reasons."

Liberal-Wing Republicans, led by Harold E. Stassen of Minnesota, and Senator Wayne Morse of Oregon, meanwhile, hailed Dewey's proffer of support for Eisenhower as "real statesmanship," but conservative Republicans were strangely silent.

Senator Robert A. Taft (R., Ohio), campaigning for reelection to the Senate in Ohio, and a possible 1952 contender himself if he wins handily, had "no comment."

Taft recently indicated he would not seek the 1952 GOP nomination unless a "great movement" developed in his behalf.

May Vie to Pick Nominee

Whether or not Taft is an active contender, friends expect him to vie with Dewey behind the scenes of the 1952 convention picking the nominee.

Professional Republican politicians outside the Taft and Dewey camps, said privately yesterday that Dewey's indorsement of Eisenhower "has definitely helped the Republican ticket in New York, and probably all over the country."

They said Dewey could have said nothing that would have more conclusively taken himself out of the 1952 race, when many Republicans were beginnnig to doubt that he meant to.

Dewey's Democratic opponent for the Governorship, Representative Walter A. Lynch, has been charging Dewey decided to run for Governor to get himself back into the Presidential running.

"His announcement for Eisenhower instead gives us a new face when we need one," said one highly-placed Republican politico.

Some Doubt Availability

Some neutral corner Republicans, however, like Senator Leverett A. Saltonstall (Mass.), continued to voice doubt about Eisenhower's availability.

These pointed out that he might be called back into the active military service, an event that would almost certainly take him out of the political running.

Political commentators wondered, too, if Stassen's applause of Dewey's move couldn't be interpreted two ways.

Said Stassen, now president of the University of Pennsylvania and a 1952 possibility himself:

"Governor Dewey showed real statesmanship in his forthright declaration. I am pleased he has taken this step. I've wired him my commendation. I have long ago expressed and continued to have a very high regard for General Eisenhower."

A close reading of the statement might show that the Minnesotan was "pleased" that Dewey was taking himself out of the race, but wasn't personally committed to the Eisenhower boom.

'Ike' Knows How to Say 'No.'

Eisenhower's failure to flatly say "No" to Dewey's proffer wasn't because "Ike" didn't know how to.

Not only in the Finder letter, but in these other earlier statements, he has been much firmer:

July 5, 1948: "I will not at this time identify myself with any political party and would not accept nomination for any public office or participate in partisan political contest."

November 22, 1949: "I am not now seeking a political position and I have no intention of doing so. I have a job to do as president of Columbia University and I am devoting all my time to it. That's what I plan to continue doing."

December 15, 1949: "I have no political angle and I'm not going to let any sort of talk by others make me a candidate."

School Bible Reading Upheld in New Jersey

TRENTON, N. J., Oct. 16 (AP).—A New Jersey law requiring the daily reading of the Bible in public schools was unanimously upheld today by the State Supreme Court.

The court ruled that the law does not conflict in any way with the first amendment to the United States Constitution, which provides for separation of church and State. Members of the United Secularists of America had attacked the 47-year-old law, charging it helped to establish religious education.

Alleged Atom Spy Ring Duo Pleads Innocent

NEW YORK, Oct. 16 (U.P.).—Julius Rosenberg, 35, and his wife, Ethel, 33, pleaded innocent today to charges of conspiring to commit espionage as part of the Klaus Fuchs-Harry Gold atom spy ring.

The new indictment also named David Greenglass, 28, Mrs. Rosenberg's brother, and Martin Sobell, 33, as conspirators with Anatoli A. Yakovlev, former Soviet vice consul in New York. Greenglass and Sobell will enter their pleas later.

Doctor Draft Total Here Under Estimate

Registration of District doctors, dentists and veterinarians eligible for the draft netted only about 300 medical men yesterday, Selective Service officials estimated.

Draft officials had expected somewhere around 800 would register, and had staffed the 10 District hospitals for a rush which did not materialize.

Registration continued from 8 a. m. to 5 p. m. At 4 p. m., with only an hour to go and with most eligible resident hospital doctors signed up, the total for the District was reported at 288.

Final figures for the day were not recorded as several hopsitals had not reported totals at the 5 p. m. closing of Selective Service headquarters.

While the Selective Service setup was more than adequate for the registration, there was considerable confusion in the minds of medical men as to whether they should register or not.

Several registration clerks, who for the most part were hospital aides, reported they had more medical men coming into their offices who found they did not have to register than those who did.

Those registering were doctors, dentists and veterinarians who were deferred from military service during World War II for medical training, eithe rat their own or Government expense, and who saw less than 21 months' service.

Draft officials, who had made their estimate after conferring with the District Medical Society, figured one factor had thrown them off.

"We had to guess at the number who had served less than 21 months when we were estimating the expected total registration," said Deputy Director Frank D. Norton.

Norton said he believed all those eligible had probably heard about the registration, and did not think that any appreciable number, if any, had failed to register.

A number of medical men who were not sure about their status signed up anyway, just to be on the safe side. The ineligibles will be weeded out by Selective Service after their registration cards are received.

One would-be registrant who thought he might be needed was 88-year-old Dr. Gaius M. Brumbaugh, general practitioner.

Dr. Brumbaugh, who lives at 1954 Biltmore st. nw., had showed up at Doctors Hospital Saturday. Dr. Edgar A. Bocock, hospital administrator, had told him the registration was Monday, and jokingly said to be sure not to forget. Dr. Brumbaugh, believing all doctors had to register, took Dr. Bocock seriously and showed up yesterday.

Freedmen's Tops List

Freedmen's Hospital led the 10 institutions in the number of medical men registered. The total there was about 75. Gallinger Hospital had about 50.

Registration in the suburban communities also was lighter than expected. Alexandria, which had expected about 48 eligibles, actually had nine registrants—five doctors, one dentist and three veterinarians. The Fairfax County draft board registered one dentist and one veterinary, with about 16 expected in advance estimates. Some may have registered at District hospitals, officials said.

Other boards had the following totals: Bethesda-Chevy Chase, 23; Silver Spring, 15; Rockville, 7, and Arlington, 8.

Meanwhile, Maj. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, national Selective Service director, announced that 50,800 men had been sent to the armed forces by September 30 — 800 more than the services had asked for. Most of these went during September.

Besides the September call, which has been filled, the rest of the year's calls include 50,000 for delivery before October 31, 70,000 for November and 40,000 for December.

4 Dependents Qualify GIs for Discharge

By the United Press

The Army, Navy and Marine Corps announced yesterday they would discharge enlisted men called to active duty from the reserves if they have four or more dependents and are serving in this country.

The Army stressed that its policy does not apply to men called up with "organized" reserve or National Guard units.

The services will count as dependents wives, children and parents, provided the parents receive more than half of their support from the soldier. Men with four or more dependents no longer will be called up and orders issued to men who have not yet reported will be rescinded.

828 Virginians Needed For December Draft

Virginia's share of the national December draft was set at 828 yesterday, out of a national call of 40,000.

In nearby Virginia, the assigned quotas include 30 for Arlington County; 23 for Alexandria City; 32 for Fairfax County; 13 for Loudoun County; nine for Prince William County; nine for Caroline County; three for King George County, and 16 for Fauquier County. Inductees are to report to induction centers before December 20.

So. Koreans Slog to Within Sight of Hamhung

WITH CAPITAL DIVISION IN NORTH KOREA, Oct. 16 (U.P.).—Patrols of this "Hell on Foot" South Korean division slogged through mud and rain tonight to within sight of the great east coast City of Hamhung, 132 air miles north of the thirty-eighth parallel.

Heavy rains along the coast for two days hampered air strikes by supporting fighters, but this crack division pushed on through the winding, rain-soaked mountain roads without asking for help.

The rugged South Koreans, almost 200 road miles north of the border, have walked all the way. They have carried their machine guns, mortars, rifles and personal packs over muddy highways and swollen coastal streams.

In three days they have driven 67 miles from the port of Wonsan where the Third Division—first into North Korea—paused to clean out Communist pockets on Kalsochiri peninsula.

American advisers with the Capital Division expected a determined Communist stand at Hamhung, a city of 150,00 lying only 6 miles northwest of the port city of Hungnam. Military targets in both cities have been bombed heavily, for Hamhung is a great rail and highway center and Hungnam an important port.

Both cities lie on the north bank of the Song River, the first natural defense barrier since Wonsan. The Capital Division's patrols were in the city's outskirts, probing the enemy's defenses.

The rapid advance of the Capital Division puts its leading regiment within 15 miles of the fortieth parallel. Resistance has been light and leading elements have hit only machine-gun and small-arms fire in their drive up the coastal highway. They spotted no enemy tanks.

Lieut. Gen. Walton H. Walker, commander of the Eighth Army, flew into Wonsan airstrip on a frontline inspection tour Monday. He complimented both the Third and the Capital Divisions on their spectacular drive from Pohang to their present line— an advance of more than 300 miles in less than a month.

Small Plants Warned About On-Job Accidents

CHICAGO, Oct. 16 (UP).—Employers must enforce safety programs against on-the-job accidents or face the possibility that Federal accident prevention laws will be enacted, delegates to the 1950 National Safety Congress were told today.

Especially at fault at the present time are small plant owners, said Miss Marion Martin, commissioner of Maine's Department of Labor and Industry. Seventy percent of industrial accidents occur in small plants, she added.

Mists Hamper Plane Search For 1000 Red-Captured Yanks

YONGHUNG, Korea, Oct. 16 (U.P.).—American planes in a race against death flew low over the rolling hills of North Korea today seeking 1000 United States prisoners of war before their Communist captors can do away with them.

Blinding rain that masked the hills in mist and hid the valleys from view hampered the search.

A strong patrol of American and South Korean infantrymen also searched for the prisoners. Last reported herded into a railroad tunnel 17 miles west of the scene of the massacre of more than 500 South Korean troops who had surrendered to North Koreans.

A Marine fighter aircraft pilot sent from Wonsan believed he saw the patrol about halfway between the east coast town of Kowan and Songnaeri, 14 miles to the west, but could not tell whether it was pushing toward Songnaeri or returning. He saw no evidence of the enemy.

The railroad tunnel is near Songnaeri, 17 miles southwest of the big east coast town of Yonghung and about 70 air miles east of the North Korean capital of Pyongyang.

Three truckloads of heavily armed American and South Korean soldiers raced out of Kowan Sunday in an effort to reach the GI prisoners.

There has been no word of the Americans in three days.

Five South Koreans who survived the massacres at Yonghung and Kowan told terrible stories of marching at gunpoint without food until exhaustion overcame them and of hundreds dying en route from malnutrition, mistreatment or murder.

Men who dropped by the wayside when they could go no further were shot or bayonetted where they lay. Of 800 who began the death march only five survived. They told how prisoners were lined up and shot and their bodies burned; how some were burned alive.

The bodies of 530 political prisoners were found at Wonsan Friday, victims of similar atrocities.

The survivors said another 100 American war prisoners were separated from the main group and marched toward Pyongyang. These were believed in addition to the 1000 reported in the tunnel.

Other reports have told of isolated bands of American prisoners moving ahead of the retreating Communists. An Air Force observer last week estimated 150 to 190 in the area immediately south of Pyongyang. It was not known whether they were among 400 believed rushed north out of Seoul at the last moment.

Estimates of the total number of American prisoners in Red hands have ranged as high as 3000 but nothing is known of their fate. Many have been reported in Pyongyang in the past.

DETROIT, Oct. 16 (U.P.).—Tightening of credit terms turned William Rogers, 39, to crime, he said. Arrested for holding up a beer store, Rogers explained: "I wanted a new car. You need so much now for a down payment and I didn't have that much cash."

Pyongyang Defense Reported Crumbling

Killed in Korea

D. C. Marine Dies; Wanted To Reenlist

Corpl. Seaton Sergt. Pino
. . . their names on casualty list

"I'm going to enlist for a third time when I come back from Korea," a veteran marine from Washington wrote home just a few days before he was killed in action.

Corpl. Edward Seaton, 25, of 300 34th pl. ne., a member of the First Marine Division, was killed September 26, the Defense Department announced yesterday.

Corporal Seaton was one of two Washington area marines on the Defense Department's casualty list. The other was Sergt. Fernando E. Pino of 303 Greenwood ave., Takoma Park, Md., wounded.

Corpl. Seaton, son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Seaton, served with the Fourth Marine Division in the Pacific in World War II. Born in Washington, he graduated from Stuart Junior High School, and worked on construction jobs before enlisting in 1943.

On returning from overseas, he reenlisted in 1947 and was stationed at the Bethesda Naval Medical Center and at Camp Pendleton, Calif. He left for Korea in September.

In attempting to capture "a ridgeline overlooking Seoul," the company commander wrote Seaton's mother, "Edward was leading his squad to a firing position and observing enemy fire when fatally wounded."

Sergt. Pino, 26, husband of Mrs. Louise Pino, with the First Marine Division, was "seriously" wounded in the foot on September 25, according to a letter he wrote his wife. The letter was sent from a hospital ship and arrived before the notification from the Department of Defense.

With the Second Marine Division on Saipan in World War II, Sergt. Pino was awarded a Purple Heart and Bronze Star.

He met his wife while on duty at the Naval Ordnance Laboratory in White Oak, Md., after the war.

Pino served as sergeant-of-the-guard at the Naval Communications Station on Nebraska ave. before leaving for Korea.

The list also included as wounded Pfc. Eugene Carl Frey and Sergt. Howard William Crowell, both of whom had previously lived in Washington.

Pfc. Frey formerly lived at 330 Taylor st. nw., but his wife has since moved to Syracuse, N. Y. Sergeant Crowell formerly lived at 1316 Belmont st. nw. His wife's whereabouts is not known.

Glen Carlin P-TA

A film showing progress of the school construction program in Alexandria and Fairfax will feature a meeting of the Glen Carlin P-TA Wednesday at 8 p. m. at the school, 5602 5th st. S., Arlington.

one of the Reds' last supply-producing points. Its fall would put a further strain on the Reds' fast-ebbing ability to keep their troops supplied.

The United Nations now had more than 80,000 troops driving deep into North Korea for the final blows o. the war.

Many More Units in Reserve

Besides these formidable forces, General MacArthur had available for action five more American divisions and two combat teams, including airborne infantry, as well as Australian and Philippine troops and at least four more South Korean divisions.

Military circles in Tokyo believed that the Korean war might be over in a matter of weeks.

The major fighting was expected to end after the fall of the Red Korean capital with a slow, costly cleanup period following for the elimination of holdouts.

How far it will be necessary to pursue the Reds to the potentially explosive Manchurian and Siberian borders is not known.

Informed sources in Tokyo denied a report published in the United States that General MacArthur had been given definite instructions by President Truman to halt American troops about 150 miles north of the thirty-eighth parallel.

Tokyo sources said the question of how close American forces would go to the Manchurian and Siberian borders had been decided long ago by military commanders.

Informed observers at the front believed that the North Koreans now may be planning to preserve as much as possible of their remaining military force for guerilla and harrassing action, much as the Communists in Greece once did.

Observers predicted this would be the type of warfare waged after the fall of Pyongyang.

No formal surrender was expected to mark the close of the present military campaign. Its transition into a hit-and-run guerilla action could go on for months to come.

These sources voiced the opinion also that the North Korean high command's main objective now was not to make a strong or definite stand anywhere outside Pyongyang—and perhaps not even there.

Harrassing Action Likely

It appeared to be part of Communist strategy now to carry on a continued harrassing action while United Nations forces attempted to establish a democratic and unified Korea.

The North Korean Army communique, however, continued to claim that its "Peoples Army" units were waging fierce defensive battles. It conceded that enemy forces in the Kaesong area "succeeded in advancing to a certain extent," but vaguely referred to the action as "against the boundary of our defense zone."

Intelligence reports from U. S. field headquarters, however, said the general pattern of fighting over the whole front north of the thirty-eighth parallel was one of "spotty resistance."

General MacArthur's latest communique listed 1161 more prisoners captured in North Korea, the bulk of them by the First Cavalry Division. This brought the total bag of prisoners to more than 66,000.

South of the thirty-eighth parallel, South Korean troops took another large group of prisoners after a futile Red guerilla raid on the east coast port of Samchok.

The final phases of the advance on Pyongyang, however, were not going to be easy.

Aerial observers spotted one convoy of 100 trucks moving southward toward Pyongyang and another of 50 trucks moving some 35 miles farther south toward Sariwon.

Enemy Charges U. S. Uses Japanese Troops

LAKE SUCCESS, N. Y., Oct. 16 (U.P.)—North Korea charged in a telegram to the United Nations today that the United States is using Japanese troops in Korea.

Their presence, the North Koreans charged, proves the existence of "a secret agreement between the American and Japanese imperialists" to oppress liberation movements in Korea and elsewhere in Asia.

The charges were denied by the United States delegation here and by Gen. Douglas MacArthur's unified command in Tokyo.

Marine Units In Korea Are Relieved

By the United Press

Vice Adm. Charles T. Joy, commander of Far Eastern Naval Forces, disclosed yesterday the Marines have been pulled out of action in the Korean fighting but kept silent about their present whereabouts.

In a message to Adm. Forrest P. Sherman, Chief of Naval Operations, he said the Leathernecks participating in the Inchon-Seoul operation had been "relieved from duty" by other U. N. forces.

Joy praised the Marines for "gallantry and outstanding effectiveness traditional to their corps" in the fighting so far.

Testimony before the House Armed Services Committee brought out recently that about 38,000 Marines of all branches were in Korea. This would be equivalent to more than two full ground divisions.

Within four days of the Pusan landing, Joy said, the Marine brigade, aided by its "devastating" carrier-based close air support, moved forward 26 miles against a "shattered and torn enemy." It was then withdrawn while still rolling forward in order to punish the Korean Communists further north.

By participating in that action, their scheduled embarkation and re-equipment for the Inchon landing was delayed to such an extent that "plans had to be altered," he said. Briefing and re-equipping was accomplished aboard ship just before the landing on Wolmi Island, which the Marines secured in 95 minutes.

Indonesian Warships Again Shell Rebel Ports

JAKARTA, Indonesia, Oct. 16 (AP).—Indonesian warships shelled the rebel strongholds of Amboina and Saparua in the South Moluccas for the second straight day today, Radio Amboina reported.

The broadcast said Saparua has been under attack since early yesterday with "considerable" casualties and damage.

Breaking silence on military operations, the broadcast admitted "heavy pressure" by the invaders, but indicated that the Indonesians are holding up final operations until reinforcements come from Macassar and Jakarta.

Indonesia, U. S. Sign Economic Agreement

JAKARTA, Indonesia, Oct. 16 (AP).—An economic pact between the United States and Indonesia was signed here today by Foreign Minister Mohammed Roem and United States Ambassador H. Merle Cochran.

The agreement, based on recommendations made by the Economic Survey Commission which visited Indonesia in April, will furnish supplies and technical assistance in fields such as public health, industry and education "as desired by the Indonesian government," the announcement said.

E. German Reds Say 99.6% Voted 'Ja'

By Ex-Aide There

Continued Help Urged For Austria

By The Associated Press

Lieut. Gen. Geoffrey Keyes flew in from Austria yesterday and said the United States must continue helping the Austrians who have shown a fine example to others in standing up to Communist threats and tactics.

Keyes has just stepped down as United States high commissioner in Austria, following transfer of occupation authority to civilian control Sunday. Ambassador Walter Donnelley has taken over as civilian high commissioner.

Talking with reporters at the airport, Keyes said Austria is a cultured, courageous and democratic country which is truly grateful for American help, past and present. He added:

"She will continue to need our help and we shall have to give it to her—but not as a charity patient or poor relation. But rather as you give to a newer member of the family to help it get started."

In time, Keyes said, the newer member will add to the family fame and fortune.

The general was asked about the significance of an unsuccessful Red attempt to stir up a general strike in Austria 10 days ago.

He said the Reds tried to take advantage of an economic situation and draw the Socialists over to the Communists by adjusting wages upward. This, he said, was intended to wreck a political coalition through the trade unions.

Most of the trade union members, he said, belong to the Socialist Party. He praised them for refusing "to accept a little economic advantage at the price of selling out to Communists inspired and subsidized by Moscow."

"The courageous stand of Austria in maintaining the coalition," he said, "not only strengthened the government but set a fine example to the other smaller countries and, I believe, gave a fine example to some of the larger countries in how to stand up against this Communist threat and the tactics employed by them."

BERLIN, Oct. 16 (AP).—East German Communists tonight flashed Sunday's rigged election as a beacon toward full Sovietization of the East zone.

The Communists proclaimed that 12,088,745 of about 13 million enfranchised East Germans had voted for their Russian-sponsored, unopposed "National Front."

They said there were only 51,187 invalid and opposition votes, and claimed these totals: 98.44 percent of all eligible East Germans voted, 99.6 percent of all votes actually cast were for returning the present parliament to office.

This, they said through Interior Minister Karl Steinhoff, showed "unanimity and determination never before witnessed in the world."

Vote Under Threat

East German voters balloted under threat. The eyes of the police were on them and they knew opposition could mean serious trouble.

The ballot was a single-list affair. There was no place to vote in opposition. In most areas there were no polling booths.

The Berliner Zeitung, a Communist newspaper, called on the newly elected candidates to remember that the "gigantic task" has just started and not to slow down because of "victory."

It warned that the "essential condition" for getting on with Sovietization was "not being disturbed and rendered impotent by the explosion of bombs."

It added that since "the danger of war is great because of remilitarization of West Germany," this question must be dealt with at once.

This led observers to believe the Communists are preparing the way for a program to increase the Volkspolizei (People's Police), whom the western allies already have charged with being a paramilitary force. They now number about 195,000.

Several Prime Points

There appeared to be several prime Communist points which will claim the attention of the parliament. These included:

1. Nationalization of all private business.
2. Revision in the constitution.
3. A cleaning out of lukewarm elements in the party and government.
4. Pushing ahead the attack on the East German church.

First on the agenda, however, is formation of the "new" government. The East zone constitution calls for a meeting of "People's Congress" within 30 days after elections.

The "People's Congress" will elect a Prime Minister who in turn selects a government for approval by the congress.

The Reds Call It 'Voting'

A THOUSAND TIMES 'JA'—Official pictures from the government of the East Zone of Germany show how the Communists got a favorable vote of more than 99 percent on Sunday. In top photo a Bernau housewife, following orders, casts an unmarked, opened ballot. In lower picture invalids vote.

High Court Upholds Wife's Suit For Loss of Marital Relations

By action of the Supreme Court yesterday, a Washington wife will be permitted to sue her husband's employer for the loss of "conjugal relations" after an accident allegedly due to the employer's negligence.

What the high court actually did was to refuse to review a Court of Appeals decision of last May in favor of Mrs. Lucia Hitaffer, 46, of 1815 Fort Davis dr. se. The review had been asked by the employer, the Argonne Co., Inc., 1629 Columbia rd. nw.

Hitaffer, about 50, injured his abdomen when he fell from a ladder while working as a maintenance man. He collected workmen's compensation but Mrs. Hitaffer also brought suit for the consequent marital losses. District Court dismissed the suit but Judge Bennett Champ Clark, for the Court of Appeals, ruled she could sue. She is asking $10,000 for loss of the "aid, assistance and enjoyment, specifically sexual relations," of her husband.

The law refers to this as the loss of "consortium," which Clark defined as inculding "love, affection, companionship, sexual relations, etc., all welded into a conceptualistic unity."

Clark ruled that since the husband can sue for loss of his wife's consortium if she is injured or is seduced, the wife certainly should be allowed to sue, regardless of workmen's compensation payments for the injury.

As to damages, Clark declared the question of determining them "poses no problem." He said "simple mathematics will suffice to set the proper quantum." Clark did not amplify this statement.

Peron Decrees Sweeping Security Measures

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina, Oct. 16 (U.P.).—A sweeping law for the repression of sabotage, espionage and treason became effective in Argentina today with publication of an official decree by President Juan D. Peron.

The law provides that any person who "in any way provokes public alarm or lowers public morale" may be sent to prison for one to eight years. It makes unauthorized publication of secret or restricted government information punishable by imprisonment of from one month to four years.

Harsh penalties are provided for convicted spies and saboteurs, who may be imprisoned for one to 25 years in peacetime or put to death in time of war.

Other penalties include: Eight to 25 years imprisonment for any person caught delivering secret defense information to a foreign power; one to 25 years for sabotage; one to 15 years for any one unlawfully entering any army, navy or air force establishment and six months to six years for photographers or mapmakers caught in defense zones.

The College of Lawyers, the Bar Association and the independent newspapers La Prensa and La Nacion, during congressional debate of the bill, expressed misgivings over the ambiguous wording of its main clauses.

Radical Opposition Deputy Silvano Santander denounced the bill as "an attack on the freedom of the Argentine people."

Pro-government newspapers supported the bill as necessary in a changing world. They pointed out that the United States new anti-totalitarian security act and Chile's law for the security of the state are very similar and perhaps as drastic.

Ben-Gurion Fails To Form Cabinet; Asks General Vote

JERUSALEM, Oct. 16 (AP).—Premier David Ben-Gurion today failed in his attempt to end Israel's first government crisis and asked Parliament to order a new general election without delay.

The Premier went before a tense Knesset (Parliament) to announce that for the past 24 hours he had been unable to form a new government.

Ben-Gurion asked Parliament to authorize a caretaker minority government to carry on in Israel until the elections are held. For this purpose, the Cabinet members remaining in the Ben-Gurion Cabinet would be retained. He has headed a four-party coalition.

Vargas Seen Planning Pay Hikes, Price Freeze

RIO DE JANEIRO, Oct. 16 (AP).—Political sources close to Brazil's President-apparent, Getulio Vargas, today said Vargas is expected to start a five-year term by freezing or rolling back prices and ordering higher wages.

The former dictator is still leading by about 1 million votes, with 5,500,000 of a probable total of 8 million ballots already counted from the October 3 elections. If he wins he will take office the first of next year.

Vishinsky, Spender Row on Aggression

LAKE SUCCESS, Oct. 16 (AP).—Russia's Andrei Vishinsky called on Western powers tonight to do what they have demanded Russia do—back up words with deeds. He was immediately accused of a new propaganda move by Percy Spender, Australian External Affairs Minister.

Fighting a Western power move to strengthen the U. N. General Assembly for action against aggression, Vishinsky told the 60-nation Assembly Political Committee that the U. S. and other nations "want us to come forward with a great many deeds. But you don't offer any of your own to show good faith."

The complaint followed his statement that the West, in demanding special emergency assemblies on 24 hours notice to cope with aggression, was trying to institute "machine-gun diplomacy, pushing buttons to spew out words and resolutions like it did on June 27 to collaborate with the aggression in Korea. Now the aggression has gone north of the thirty-eighth parallel."

Spender retorted that Vishinsky's hour-long onslaught was "propaganda, intended to delude a world that has been waiting for some action from the Russians, from whose lips have been falling the cries of peace, peace, peace.

"What do we get? Russian amendments to kill a resolution intended to insure peace. I can't imagine any man who desires peace will be concerned with legalities.

"If tomorrow we had some degree of sincerity, we would go along the high road of peace with Russia."

No Vote Taken

The exchange enlivened an involved constitutional debate in the committee over points in the Western power proposals but the committee adjourned until Tuesday without a vote.

Vishinsky told the committee that the majority was trying to change the Charter without a constitutional convention. He said that if Charter changes were wanted, a legal convention should be held. But he added that the Western powers feared any proposed changes would not get a two-thirds majority in the convention or final Russian ratification necessary to effect them.

Western power delegates have argued that they intend to do nothing more than bring into play provisions of the Charter already there.

The Russian outburst came after the Economic and Social Council defeated a Russian move to give North Korean Communists a commanding voice in rebuilding Korea. It rejected, 14-3, a Soviet proposal to put North Koreans, along with South Koreans, on a temporary Korean relief survey commission.

Herman Santa Cruz, Chilean president of the Council, immediately offered Russia a place on the seven-nation fact-finding commission which will determine how much money and time will be necessary to rebuild the country.

Some sources have figured that the first-year emergency cost will be more than 70 million dollars and that the program may eventually reach 250 million dollars.

Soviets Delay Acceptance

A. A. Arutiunian, Soviet Delegate to the Council, said he will have to get Moscow's approval for Russia to serve. The Council adjourned indefinitely until the word comes.

One Western delegate said after the meeting:

"This puts Russia on the spot. Now we'll find out whether they'll cooperate with the U. N. on helping rebuild Korea or will obstruct further."

Neither Korean regime was appointed to the commission.

The United States is the only other Big-Power member of the commission, which was proposed by Australia. Others include Australia, Chile, and Pakistan, all of them members of the Assembly's Master Commission on the relief and rehabilitation of Korea and Belgium and India.

The appointment brought India back into the picture on Korea. She was left off the Master Commission because she could not support Assembly approval for U. N. troops to go north of the thirty-eighth parallel.

Only Poland and Czechoslovakia (other Slav block members of the 18-nation Council) supported Arutiunian's demand that representatives of North Korea be included in the survey committee.

The Russian argued that the Koreans themselves were in the best position to judge their own needs.

India Opposes Move

R. R. Saksena, India's Consul General in New York, opposed such recognition of the North Koreans who have been branded aggressors by most U. N. members in the Korean conflict. He and others pointed out that the commission can consult anyone they wish in their fact-finding task.

The Russian bloc abstained, but all other 15 countries voted for the Australian proposal to set up the fact-finding commission.

The United States and six other sponsors of a peace patrol, U. N. troops, and emergency Assembly sessions program submitted a revised draft at today's meeting. It incorporated suggestions of a number of other countries.

United States Delegate John Foster Dulles said the sponsors changed the language of the resolution to provide that the Assembly would not call for armed action until after a breach of peace occurred.

"We have never had the thought to doing anything that could be interpreted as preventive war," he said.

The Russians immediately countered with amendments intended to give only the Security Council the power to use U. N. troops and to allow the use of the veto in calling any General Assembly by a Security Council vote.

Bloc members also protested that 24 hours was not enough time for a meeting to be called and demanded a two-week notice limit. Russia's Andrei Vishinsky did not take the floor in the opening point-by-point discussion.

24 Nations Join

Genocide Pact Ratified, Law In 90 Days

LAKE SUCCESS, Oct. 16 (AP).—The United States Genocide Convention became international law today as five more nations pledged that never again would a Hitler be permitted to destroy racial, national, religious, linguistic or political groups.

Submitting their ratifications to Secretary General Trygve Lie at U. N. headquarters were Ambassador Jean Chauvel of France, who also turned in Cambodia's agreement accession; Dr. Ruben Esquievel of Costa Rica, John M. Chang of the Republic of Korea, and Dr. Jean Price Mars of Haiti.

This brought the number of ratifications to 24, although the Philippines and Bulgaria submitted theirs with reservations, to which other nations have objected.

Twenty ratifications were needed to give the document legal standing. The pact will become operable and in full force in 90 days.

Dr. Rafael Lemkin, professor of international law at Yale University, and author of the pact, congratulated the nations which had ratified the convention and said it read like "a roll of honor of humanitarian nations, and their contributions will be remembered forever."

Brig. Gen. Gordon R. Young, District Engineer Commissioner, will make the principal address. Reports will cover advanced pledges made before the campaign started October 12, as well as gifts received since that time.

Nehru Hits Plan for U. N. Armed Force as Turn Toward War questioner that these risks seemed less today than two weeks ago.

He referred to the U. N. Assembly resolution that provided authorization for the crossing of the parallel and the resolution now being debated. Under it, nations would set up special forces to be used at the order of the Security Council or the Assembly to combat aggression. This is a seven-nation plan backed by the United States.

The Prime Minister said India could not join the Korean commission "because of our disagreement with major parts of this resolution."

Western nations had been particularly anxious to have India represented on the commission to unify and rebuild Korea after hostilities cease.

Nehru said:

"After the collapse of the North Korean armies in South Korea, we felt that the time had come for an effort to be made for a peaceful solution which could only be based on a unified, independent Korea and a fresh election under the auspices of the United Nations."

The Prime Minister said it was obvious that both China and Russia were deeply concerned with the future of a neighboring territory like Korea "and that no satisfactory solution in the Far East could be arrived at by ignoring these two powers."

Nehru said that "if new China had been admitted into the United Nations at the proper time, the crisis in the Far East might not have arisen and events might have taken a different turn."

Nehru said that the idea of social justice as embodied in communism attracted many Asian peoples, although most of these people favored democratic institutions.

"World communism in its expansionist aspect," Nehru declared, "just like any other expansionist movement, is considered a danger to peace and freedom. It appears, however, sometimes in the guise of a liberating movement."

Canton Is Reported Opened to Shipping

HONGKONG, Oct. 16 (U.P.).—Chinese Communist officials have authorized foreign shipping to stop at Canton, one year after their troops occupied the teeming south China port and stopped all foreign vessels from entering the harbor, reports from the mainland said today.

Under new regulations ships first must apply for permission to enter, then pick up a pilot and submit to government inspection of passengers and cargo.

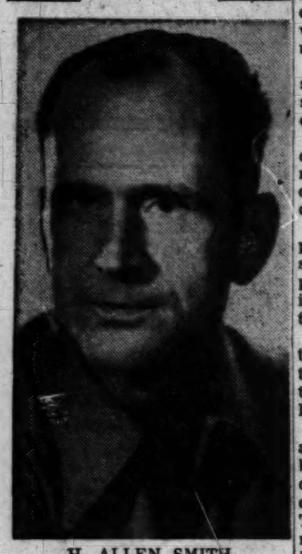
Author Called Smith to Talk At Luncheon



H. ALLEN SMITH
. . . one of the Smith boys

The man who has made more comments about Smiths than most people will be among five persons to address the first Washington Post Book and Author luncheon of the 1950-51 season.

He is H. Allen Smith, author of the new book, "People Named Smith." Smith will speak at 1 p. m. on Thursday, October 26, at the luncheon in the Presidential Room of the Statler Hotel.

Smith, born in McCleansboro, in southern Illinois, has managed to attain top rank as an American humorist despite his early apprenticeship as a newspaperman. He made the weather, dry or wet, a subject for his humor when most journalists regarded it as a subject of very usual conversation.

Smith deserted the newspaper business when his books, "Low Man on a Totem Pole," "Life in a Putty Knife Factory" and "Lost in the Horse Latitudes," hit best-seller lists. Since then he has managed also to dress up baseball with a whimsical novel about a cat named, not Smith, but "Rhubarb."

Other speakers on the first program of the sixth annual luncheon series will be Jonathan Daniels, Inglis Fletcher, Jay and Audrey Walz.

Tickets, at $3, for the October 26 luncheon are available at the following book stores: Ballantyne's, Brentano's, Community Book Shop, Paul Pearlman, Kann's book department, Francis Scott Key, Pursell's, Woodward & Lothrop, Whyte's, Savile's, Sidney Kramer, Airport Book Shop, Center Book Shop in Bethesda and, in Alexandria, Better Mouse Trap and Chequire House.

Book and Author luncheons also are scheduled for January 9, March 8 and April 26.

NEW YORK, Oct. 16 (AP).—More shots were fired in the color television controversy today as manufacturers and retailers sought to persuade the public to continue buying present-type sets.

The television committee of the Radio - Television Manufacturers Association discussed in private the situation created by Government approval of the Columbia Broadcasting System's color method. A spokesman declined to say what action, if any, was decided upon.

He added, at the end of a session lasting several hours, that a statement would be issued Tuesday.

Meanwhile, the big Philco Corp. of Philadelphia joined some other major manufacturers in criticism of CBS color, and William Balderston, president, said:

"Color television with bigger pictures than CBS's 12½-inch screen model, finer quality and performance, is being perfected in the laboratories of the industry today.

"It is our firm conviction that this is what will eventually reach the market and we believe further that such a color system is at least two years away."

CBS reported it had received a "terrific response" to a radio broadcast last night by its president, Dr. Frank Stanton, to set owners and prospective set buyers. Telephone callers, said a spokesman, expressed keen interest in how soon color telecasts would be available, as well as equipment to convert present sets to color.

Stanton reassured set owners that their present sets would continue to give all the service they are now giving, as black and white telecasting would continue for years to come and color would be a supplementary service to begin with.

But in an apparent rejoinder to manufacturers who have forecast a lack of public demand for color sets for the CBS system, Stanton advised prospective buyers to purchase sets only from manufacturers who promise to make adapters and converters for their sets available later. And he said the prospective set buyer by waiting "for, say, six months" may save some money and "will have a self-contained set with built-in compatibility and built-in color."

Philco's statement rounded out response from the "Big Three." Radio Corp. of America and Admiral Corp. previously had voiced strong criticism of the CBS system.

In a new statement, contained in letters to its distributors, RCA said today the CBS system "is scientifically unsound and against the public interest."

Walter A. Buck, RCA vice president and general manager of its RCA Victor Division, said as did Balderston that the public should have no fear in buying present-type sets.

Olympic Radio & Television of Long Island City, N. Y., issued a statement calling the Federal Communications Commission's decision "premature and ill-timed." But it told dealers the firm would be among the first to make adapters, converters and color sets "when color television has been perfected to the point of meeting basic requirements."

Percy L. Schoenen, executive vice president, said those requirements were: 1. That the screen size should be 16 inches or larger; 2. The entire device must be compact enough to fit into a cabinet not substantially larger than those now used; and 3. The cost must be within the means of the average wage earner.

In its present form a set to receive CBS color is limited to 12½ inches in picture size by the motor-driven color disc used to add color to the incoming images.

But CBS says the development of tri-color direct view tubes will enable its system to dispense with the motor-driven disc and to produce pictures as large as those on black and white sets.

Silver Spring Antique Exhibit Features Unusual Collection

Need an old Pennsylvania cookie cutter, a powderhorn, or a Jacobean court cupboard?

These and other articles went on display at the fifth Silver Spring Antique Exhibition, which opened yesterday in the Silver Spring Armory, Georgia and Wayne aves.

Among the approximately 500 afternoon visitors were Mrs. Dean Acheson, wife of the Secretary of State; Mrs. Hume Wrong, wife of the Canadian Ambassador, and an elderly woman who loves antique shows so well she drove with her chauffeur from Michigan for the opening.

Spread out in 42 booths were the wares of dealers in the District and seven States.

Pressed glass, Dresden and Meissen ware, clocks, toy banks, old prints, swords, jewelry—almost anything, so long as it was old, could be seen.

Among the objects a shopper could find:

A chair the seat of which was made from a piece of the tree under which William Penn made a treaty with the Indians. It was made by Mathew Van Dusen, a shipbuilder, about 1810.

A floral spray in paste, said to have been worn on the stage by Lillian Russell.

A primitive forerunner of a tricycle made about 1865. When seen yesterday it had a flaxen-haired doll of about 1830 in the seat.

Small Pennsylvania chalk sculpture, a folk art that flourished from about 1810 to 1830.

A toy bank with a black spaniel that would jump with a penny through a hoop held by a clown into a barrel; and another toy bank which featured the shooting of the apple off the head of William Tell.

A silver punch ladle made by Robert Keyworth at Ninth st. and Pennsylvania ave. about 1815, and which was once in the possession of the Blair family.

A rare trestle-footed Moravian refectory table probably made between 1670 and 1720.

A Jacobean court cupboard of limed oak, a panel on the left of which shows the devil intruding in a card game. The opposite panel shows the same scene—only the devil has speared with his pitchfork one player, and another has dived under the table to rescue the rum before it spills.

The antique show, sponsored by the Maryland National Guard Service Company, 115th Infantry, is open from 11 a. m. to 11 p. m. through Friday.

Unified Transit Plan Proposed for Area

A proposal for a Metropolitan Transit Authority, which would take over transportation throughout the Washington area, will be studied by the public utilities committee of the Interfederation Council.

The idea was brought up at a council meeting last night by Walter Mulligan, president of the Prince Georges County Civic Federation.

Mulligan said Capital Transit Co. officials hace said privately that there is "considerable danger the company may deteriorate into a municipally owned body."

This would mean, he said, that a political group would be running the transit company and that "excessive taxes on everybody" would result.

Mulligan suggested a study of the authority plan, which would set up a tax-free public corporation to purchase the assets of Capital Transit and other companies serving the metropolitan area, and operate the facilities.

Mrs. Franklin G. Sartwell, council chairman, suggested that the House District Committee should be asked to appoint a subcommittee to study the plan.

The council committee which will study the idea is headed by Henry H. Snelling of the Montgomery County Civic Federation.

Fort Davis

Mrs. Edward Morris, president of the Fort Davis Citizens' Association, announced last night receipt of $101 in a drive for the court fight against a gas rate increase.

The association voted to ask for street improvements on 38th st. se. from S to an alley connecting 38th and Texas ave.; Texas ave. from S to Carpenter st.; Pope st. from 38th to Nash st.; and repair of a short section of 35th st.

Other officers: Barrington D. Parker, first vice president; W. A. Haynes, second vice president; Mrs. Hallie Q. Speed, third vice president; Mrs. Theresa Dorsey, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Regina Mason, recording secretary; Walter B. Sanderson, treasurer; Mrs. Elinor R. Waller, financial secretary; Jesse M. Carter, sergeant-at-arms, and Robert W. Gordon, chaplain.

Citizens of Chevy Chase

Attorney John D. Fitzgerald of 3403 Oliver st. nw. last night was elected president at the first meeting of the Citizens Association of Chevy Chase, D. C. in the Chevy Chase Community Center.

Other officers elected: D. N. Merryfield, first vice president; F. Reed Dickerson, second vice president; Henry C. Hallam, secretary; John A. Patterson, jr., treasurer, and Henry M. Fowler and William K. Norwood, delegates to the Federation of Citizens Associations.

The organization discussed but took no action on the gas rate increase question.

Public Interest Association

The Public Interest Civic Association last night voted to oppose the proposed rezoning of the southwest corner of 3d and G sts. ne. from residential to commercial.

Meeting at Calvary Episcopal Church, the group also opposed the position of the Board of Education on the appearance of racially mixed groups on public school stages.

Lincoln Park

The Lincoln Park Citizens Association last night asked the District Commissioners to keep the 1951 budget within anticipated income.

The association, meeting in Epworth Methodist Church, also asked abolition of the personal property tax and reduction of the real estate tax from $2.15 to $2.

Capitol View

William O. Woodson, of 5348 E. Capitol st., was elected last night to his seventh term as president of the Capitol View Civic Association.

Others elected at the meeting in the Richardson school: John F. Wilkerson, vice president; Mrs. Marion Tinnent, recording secretary; Mrs. Thomasine Matthews, corresponding secretary; John B. Rhodes, financial secretary; Isaac Westmoreland, treasurer, and Joseph Allen, chaplain.

The group asked the Board of Education to relieve the overcrowding at Richardson School and Kelly Miller Junior High School.

'Job' Permits For Penalized Drivers Urged

More leniency toward drivers who have had their licenses suspended or revoked was urged last night by the Commissioners Traffic Advisory Board.

The board went on record in favor of restricted licenses for drivers who might be under mandatory suspension or revocation for such offenses as manslaughter, negligent homicide, etc. They pointed out restricted licenses for persons to drive on their jobs, should be permitted.

Nathan M. Lubar, chairman of the board's laws and regulations committee, was asked to draft a formal resolution for presentation at the next meeting.

George E. Keneipp, director of vehicles and traffic, said he would recommend such licenses to the D. C. Commissioners once the resolution is drawn. He pointed out that under present laws, while a driver with a revoked permit has the right of appeal, the review board's cases are so numerous an unusually long time is required to review each case.

Keneipp also told the board there has been a 10 percent increase in Washington traffic between August, 1949, and August, 1950.

Keneipp said the controversial traffic light at 14th and D sts. sw., will remain off for at least 60 days, during which a complete survey of conditions along 14th st. will be undertaken.

Spicknall Quits Hyattsville Council, Is Leaving Community

H. Wilson Spicknall, president of the Hyattsville City Council, last night announced his resignation from the council effective November 1.

The oldest council member in point of service, Spicknall is serving his third four-year term. The council voted to elect a new president at the next meeting, November 6, and make a temporary appointment to fill Spicknall's council seat which expires next year.

Spicknall, who lives at 4319 Madison st., Hyattsville, will be replaced as chairman of the postoffice committee by Mayor Caesar Aiello.

The outgoing council president also announced that T. Hammond Welsh, president of the Hyattsville Building Association and a Prince Georges County Commissioner, had agreed to serve on the postoffice committee which is working to have a central postoffice established in Hyattsville.

The meeting was also told that the city is getting new handles for its parking meters to eliminate mechanical troubles encountered with the ones now in use.

The council's police committee agreed to meet to considers applications for another full time policeman.

Just what do you own when you own a share of stock?

When you own a share of stock, you own a share of a business.

Take, for example, an automobile company with 5,000,000 shares of stock. Let's say you own just one of those shares. Even so, you are an owner of an interest in that company, in its factories, lathes, steel, its reputation—everything it has.

Suppose you own a share, or 10 shares, of a company in some other field—railroad, drugs and chemicals, public utility, oil, food products, aviation or anything else. Again, you own an interest in that company—its laboratories, supplies, patents, the "know-how" of its workers and managers. A lot of other people own the other shares—investors like yourself.

A single share, or 10 shares, may seem small. But the average stockholder in many of our biggest corporations owns no more than 40 to 50 shares of stock.

Regardless of how many shares you own, the stock certificate you have is registered in your name on the books of the company. It is legal evidence of the shares you own. Their number determines the extent of your interest in the company—in the profits it may earn, the dividends it may pay, the risks you have assumed.

The shares you own give you, among other things, the right to help elect the men who direct your company's policies, chart its course. These directors report on the company's operations to you, and to the other stockholders of your company.

Shares in hundreds of different companies are bought and sold on the New York Stock Exchange every business day by people all over the country. These companies are "listed." They have met certain requirements to place their shares on the Stock Exchange. One of these requirements is to publish information that is essential to an informed understanding of the company's financial condition.

It's American to own homes, insurance policies, savings accounts and automobiles. It's also American to own stocks.

Whether you own 1 share, or 10, or 1000, you own a share of a business . . . and to that extent it is your company.

More than 1,550 offices of Member Firms of the New York Stock Exchange are located in 378 cities. Through them investors across the country can buy or sell the securities of listed companies on any business day. From them investors can get—without obligation—the facts about stocks and bonds which are the necessary first step to an investment decision.

High Court Upsets Florida Negro Ruling

agreed to review a second Florida case in which the scope of the civil rights statute may be importantly defined. This is the post-Civil War law making it a crime to conspire to abridge any citizen's rights. The question is whether the statute is confined only to those rights and privileges pertaining to national citizenship or much more broadly to those secured by the fourteenth amendment.

The case is that of three Miami detectives and a policeman charged with conspiracy under the Federal law in connection with the beating of four Negro employes of a lumber company. Other issues are involved, but the Government hopes to obtain a broader definition of the civil rights statute on which the Justice Department's civil rights section depends. A 1945 decision left its scope in doubt and the Court of Appeals took the narrower view in the Miami case.

Other Actions Taken

In other actions, the Supreme Court yesterday:

1. Refused to consider its decision of last June that the Federal Government, not Texas and Louisiana, has paramount rights to the oil-rich areas in the Gulf of Mexico off their shores, the areas popularly called tidelands.

Texas' Attorney General Price Daniel immediately said he would take the final legal step—filing a second rehearing request, though this move is rarely successful. Daniel said he was "shocked" at the court's action.

In turning down the request yesterday, the court, in fact, tightened up its June opinion in the Texas case by altering a few words in Justice Douglas' majority opinion. It said that Texas had entered the Union in 1845 "on an equal footing with the original States in all respects whatever" whereas in June the opinion said merely that Texas entered "on an equal footing with the existing States." Douglas based his opinion of Federal supremacy on the theory that under the equal footing clause the State gave up its off-shore rights on entering the Union.

2. Turned down a request by the RD-DR Corp., a motion picture concern, that the court reconsider the 25-year-old doctrine that movies are not included in the "press" whose freedom is guaranteed in the Constitution. The setback for the movie industry came in a case involving censorship by the city of Atlanta of the controversial "Lost Boundaries," a film about a Negro doctor's attempts to pass the color line in New Hampshire.

Only Justice Douglas was reported as favoring review of the case. The result is to make secure, at least until a new case is brought, the movie censorship now exercised by such States as Maryland and some cities.

3. Agreed to consider an attack on the constitutionality of a California libel law. This law restricts damages in libel cases against newspapers and slander cases against broadcasters and permits substitution of a retraction in place of money damages. The case was brought by Erwin P. Werner, former Los Angeles city attorney, in a $100,000 suit against the Southern California Associated Newspapers over a story that he had been in a State prison at a particular time.

British Civil Defense Plan Gets $280 Million

LONDON, Oct. 16 (U.P.).—Britain shoved her civil defense program into "priority one" position today with a $280 million recruiting program and appealed for sixteen million volunteers to bolster the Nation's defense in case of an atomic attack.

Home Secretary Chuter Ede said 10,000 volunteers poured into civil defense recruiting offices each month, but that the number was not sufficient in the age of atomic war. He said the program would cover an estimated three years.

Wisconsin Milk Case Watched Here

A Wisconsin city's limitation on milk imports will be considered by the Supreme Court and the result could have an important bearing on the District's milk fight.

The case accepted yesterday by the high court comes from Madison, Wis. The Dean Milk Co. is attacking a city ordinance prohibiting the sale of pasteurized milk within the city unless it is pasteurized and bottled within 5 miles of the city center and unless the farms producing the milk are within 25 miles of the city.

The dairy contends the mileage limitations are unconstitutional, particularly when applied to prohibit the sale of milk pasteurized under the Federal model milk ordinance in a milk shed with a United States Public Health Service rating of more than 90 percent.

Washington has had repeated wrangles over the District's attempts to bar the sale here of milk which comes from farms not within the area inspected by the District Health Department. All District milk comes across a State line to get here.

Another case in the Federal Courts, but not yet in the Supreme Court, involves an attempt by Keokuk, Iowa, to ban sales of milk from farms outside that city's health department inspection area. A Federal District Court last August ruled, in effect, that the city couldn't erect such barriers to interstate commerce. The farms in question were across the Mississippi in Illinois.

Weather Plays Important Role in Crop Control Giving Legislative Efforts Air of Futility

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

The futility of trying to control agricultural production through legislative action has never been better demonstrated than this year, and never has the effect of weather conditions upon crops been more effectively displayed.

At present the country is concerned about the cotton supply. Whereas four months ago the Government had almost 3½ million bales of cotton on hand, and many experts were fearful of a surplus, today the Government's supplies have been trimmed to 500,000 bales, and it has been forced to restrict exports to almost two thirds to conserve the supply for domestic use. The last is a drastic move. For years cotton men have worked hard to build up a foreign market. Any such restrictions as ordered last week wipe out the effects of such work.

Dates From Acreage Bill

The cotton situation dates from an acreage bill passed a year ago. Designed to reduce cotton production to about 21 million acres, it was so drawn that it ended with reducing plantings to about 18 million. States with the largest per acre production were the ones with the largest acreage cuts. On top of all that the weather interfered with plans. For instance, Oklahoma's production as the result of bad weather and insect infestation, dropped from 610,000 bales to 190,000. Texas dropped from 6,040,000 in 1949 to 2,775,000; and an average yield of 266 pounds an acre to only 193. Between congressional planning, bugs and bad weather, the cotton farmer experienced a bad time.

One of the most dramatic changes in crop prospects, however, was recorded in both American and Canadian wheat, although it is far more drastic in Canada than here. The result is that Canada and the United States are going to have difficulty in meeting their joint demands for export and domestic reserves, which, fortunately, are at an all-time peak.

In wheat, as in cotton, the reduction in production is largely due to a restriction of acreage by Congress. Fortunately, the United States yield this year was good and made up for some of the cut in plantings. The production per acre was 16.7 bushels, compared with 14.9 last year, and almost up to the average for the last 10 years of 17 bushels.

Weather Reversal

The situation in Canada, however, shows how dependent we are, in spite of modern crop-saving methods, etc., on the weather for plentiful food.

Two months ago Canada was working overtime trying to get an increase in its export quota under the international wheat agreement. The United States crop promised 150 million bushels less than last year. Prospects were that Canada would have an increase of about that much.

In mid-August the Canadian government officially forecast a crop of 550 million bushels, and there seemed every chance that it would be top grade. But 48 hours after that forecast, an early frost hit the great Canadian prairies.

There is no experience so discouraging as to see a crop wither overnight. A few years ago it was common in our own Southwest, particularly from rust, hail, etc., and we still are subject to frosts and drought. In Canada fields that promised to yield 30 bushels of No. 1 or No. 2 wheat to the acre were transformed overnight to a possibility of about three or four bushels of low-grade grain fit only for livestock feeding.

The most expert forecasters of Canadian crops today estimate that they will still have a big crop—maybe as much as 400 million bushels. But it is doubtful that half of that will be of milling grade, and must go to livestock feed. The result is that Canada, instead of being anxious to increase its export quota in the International Wheat Agreement, will have to call on the United States to take over part of its foreign commitments.

On the other hand, a month ago there was almost universal agreement that there would be an extraordinary amount of soft corn in our Midwest.

It still is fairly sure that there will be much soft or wet corn. But good drying weather, following a cool summer that delayed the crop's maturing, has changed the original picture. Now it is almost certain that there will be plenty of storable corn. The soft corn will not be more than can be easily fed early after harvest, or by means of silage.

This is important because corn is our most important crop, whether most persons realize it or not. On it depend our supplies of meat, dairy products, poultry, etc. We are just now getting back to normal beef production that was reduced by the near corn failure of 1948. Corn furnishes indirectly a lot more of our food than wheat, or any other grain.

Physicist Reports Einstein Erred On Speed of Light

LONDON, Oct. 16 (U.P.).—The Department of Scientific and Industrial Research announced yesterday that light travels faster than Albert Einstein thought it did when he figured out his theory of relativity.

The department said light travels 11 miles a second faster than the now generally accepted figure of 186,271 miles a second. It added that Dr. L. Essen of Britain's National Physical Research Laboratory established the new speed of 186,282 miles a second in experiments with radio waves.

"When Doctor Essen announced in 1947 that the figures should be 186,282 miles per second; the result was received with some skepticism," the department said. "He has now confirmed the result using more refined apparatus and results recently obtained in Sweden and in the U. S. A. agree with this value to within one kilometer a second."

Camps for Air Raid Refugees Urged Here

By Thomas Winship
Post Reporter

District civil defense planners yesterday heard citizen experts on the housekeeping phases of preparedness in case of air raids. Some of the suggestions:

Register, fingerprint and perhaps dog-tag all preschool children.

Construct pre-fabricated housing on the city's outskirts to shelter 40,000 bombed-out victims—or pitch huge tent encampments.

Establish field kitchens at several points, including Griffith Stadium (if it survives), for first day "shock" feeding.

Stock the city with thousands of paper cups and plates.

First Meeting of Service

It was the first meeting of the "emergency welfare service" of the civil defense organization.

Engineer Commissioner Gordon R. Young, presiding at the round-table conference, asked for, and received, free discussion and proposals on these activities: Registration, emergency clothing, housing, feeding and special social welfare problems.

Young named chairmen to study the five categories and asked recommendations "as soon as possible," and "certainly before November 10 if the proposals require expenditure of District government funds." The city heads are preparing a new budget for submission to the Bureau of the Budget.

Mrs. William M. Galvin, vice chairman of the welfare service group, suggested a city-wide register of "all children who can not talk" as a sure method of returning children, separated from parents during an air raid, to their families or relatives. Several suggested teachers or block wardens could conduct the registration.

Young said the proposal was of "great value" but recommended further study.

Mrs. Clifford Davis, chairman of the War Hospitality Committee's information service in the last war, was appointed chairman of the Civil Defense Registration Committee.

"Ready and Willing"

She offered the services of 110 women workers of the World War II information service who are "ready and willing" to perform defense work. The group, she said, could be expanded easily. Young said Mrs. Davis' group will be asked to organize registration teams at each of the em .gency welfare service stations to be set up.

Under the National Security Resources Board plan, air raid "refugees" may seek information, and in some cases, service on registration, food, housing and clothing at each of these stations.

Mrs. Eulene Hawkins, director of Red Cross home service, District Chapter, said her organization might help maintain a city-wide refugee registration file.

On emergency clothing, Herbert J. Rich, proprietor of a shoe store and other businesses, agreed it was out of the question to stock "ladies', men's and children's garments." The District, said Young, "cannot go into the department store business."

Within an Hour

According to Rich, clothing could be rushed to a disaster area from Silver Spring or Baltimore stores within an hour. "For the first few hours it would be a question of blankets," he said.

Acting Civil Defense Director John Fondahl suggested the District consider stocking "a very few items in small, medium and large sizes." Hugh K. Duffield, district manager of Sears, Roebuck Co., was appointed chairman of the clothing committee.

Discussion was lively on refugee housing.

Mrs. John McNamara, member of the 1948 Inaugural Housing Committee, said pre-fabricated housing, for possibly 40,000 persons, is the only sure way to provide for the A-bomb homeless. "It should be built well in advance so everyone will know exactly where to go."

Permanency Stressed

Permanent toilet, shower and bathing facilities in an area where the National Guard could set up tents was the suggestion offered by Fred S. Kogod, a theater operator.

Alfred Reiser, chairman of the shelter manager committee of the American Red Cross here, outlined the Red Cross' working program whereby 10 schools, in scattered locations, are ready to handle roughly 1000 persons "at a moment's notice," he said.

William Cary, jr., District health engineering officer, said he feared schools and other such facilities would be needed by the medically injured. "We must consider housing refugees perhaps 50 and 70 miles away," he observed.

SUSIE Q.

"This way you can keep an eye on Junior while he sails his boat!"

Nee Rapped for Reported Statement on Credit

A member of the Federal Reserve Board, R. M. Evans, took Washington businessman Maury L. Nee to task yesterday for Nee's reported press statement that the board acted in "bad faith" in tightening credit regulations.

The regulations took effect at 12:01 a. m. yesterday. They mean shorter payoff periods for the purchase of automobiles, appliances and furniture on installment plans. Larger down payments are required on purchases of appliances and furniture.

Nee, as chairman of the Retail Planning Committee of the Retail Industry Committee, was quoted in the New York Times Sunday as charging the board with "bad faith." Nee is treasurer of the P. J. Nee Co., Washington furniture firm.

In a telegram sent to Nee yesterday, Federal Reserve Governor Evans said Nee's "assertion . . . as reported in the press is entirely untrue."

The telegram continues: "Meetings held by the board staff with various trade representatives last week were called to discuss administrative details connected with the possible future broadening of the scope of the regulations and were not for the purpose of discussing the terms of the regulation."

Nee yesterday said he did not recall making the "bad faith," statement in the exact words of the quote. But, he added, "I think the board acted ill-advisedly. I don't think they acted fairly with retailers."

Nee said he was amazed that Regulation W should be amended less than a month after it became effective. Regulation W, imposed September 18, called for credit tightening.

Yesterday, George M. Clark, president of the Consumer Bankers Association, asserted that the action was "hasty, precipitous and arbitrary."

In the meantime, Washington business observers said it would take several weeks at least for the full effect of the credit curbs to be determined accurately.

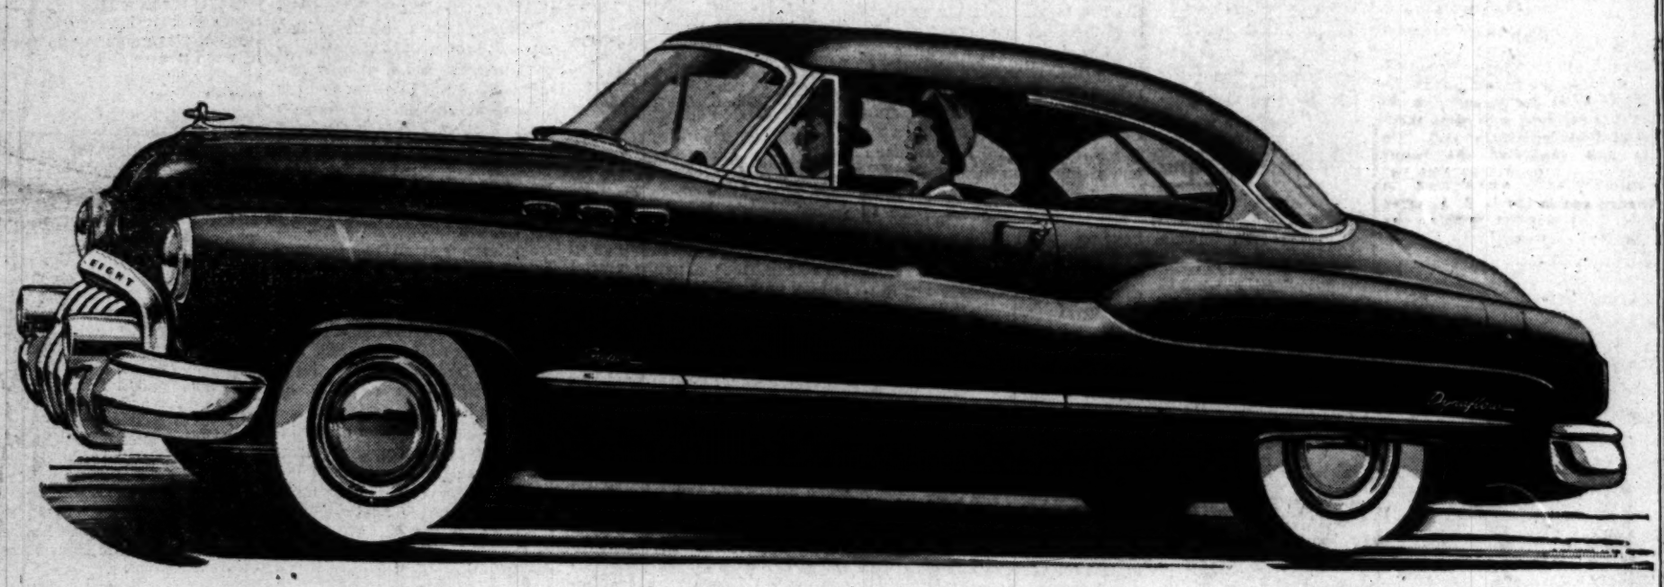
Want a long run for your money?



Better Buy Buick!

You want a new car to be tops in things like style and room and comfort and power——and a thrill-packed fifteen minutes with the nimble number pictured here will show you it has all these things in abundant measure.

So you ask us—how about money? What does it cost to buy a Buick—and to own one?

All right—let us ask you some questions.

Take first cost. Do you know that Buick prices start down at a level below what you'd pay for some sixes—and that every Buick, on a cents-per-pound basis, is a stand-out buy?

Take operating cost. Do you know that the bang you'll get from Buick's Fireball power comes from a valve-in-head engine—recognized by engineers as a thrifty saver of fuel?

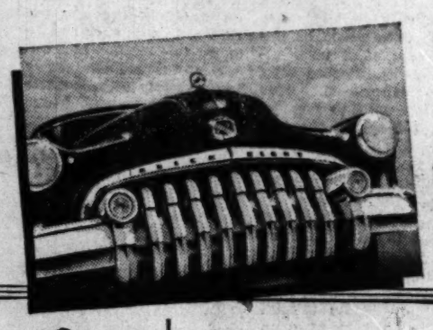
Do you know that owners of 1950 Buicks are writing us rave letters, saying that this year's version is the most economical Buick ever built?

Do you know that such comfort features as coil springs on all four wheels protect the car as well as the passengers—and throw in an extra saving because they need no servicing, and are practically breakproof to boot?

Do you know that Dynaflow*—in addition to keeping you fresh as a daisy on a day-long drive—caps its convenience with savings on tires, cuts down the strain on transmissions and engines—and eliminates all friction clutch repairs, because it hasn't any?

Take final cost. Do you know that when the owner of a Buick gets a yen for a later model, the prices that Buicks command on a used-car lot are the ultimate proof of their long-run value?

So if you want a real run for your money, better buy Buick. And the first step is very simple: Go see your Buick dealer—soon—and get an order signed.



FOUR-WAY FOREFRONT—This rugged front end (1) sets the style note, (2) saves on repair costs—vertical bars are individually replaceable, (3) avoids "locking horns," (4) makes parking and garaging easier.

*Dynaflow Drive is standard on ROADMASTER, optional at extra cost on SUPER and SPECIAL models.

Genocide Convention

The United Nations convention defining and outlawing genocide as an international crime received yesterday the last of the ratifications necessary to bring it into effect. The convention was adopted by the General Assembly at Paris not quite two years ago and was signed by 43 countries. But formal ratification by the 20 governments required to give it the full force of international law was slower; the United States, which led in having the convention adopted by the Assembly, has lagged lamentably behind and is not among the ratifying nations. We hope that the Senate, when it returns, will heed the repeated appeals of the President to put the United States on record among the governments that consider the intentional destruction of whole ethnic groups as a barbaric attack on civilization itself.

The term genocide was coined by Prof. Rafael Lemkin of the Yale Law School and was first introduced by him in the League of Nations in 1933. More largely, perhaps, than any other individual, he has been responsible, through his dedicated persistence, for having it recognized as an international crime by the United Nations. The convention which he fostered does no more than commit the contracting governments to punish those guilty of genocide. It cannot in itself be regarded as a very formidable barrier against the hideous offense it prohibits. But it is significant, nevertheless, as a cornerstone of the structure of international law by which the world must one day be governed. It is a misfortune that the United States was not among the nations that laid that cornerstone.

No Solos, Please

Gen. George Kenney has taken off on a dangerous solo flight with his statement that the Air Force was the "dominant factor" in the Korean campaign. If the success in Korea was not wholly a victory through footpower, neither was it a victory through air power, and General Kenney's assertion that "ground troops stayed on the peninsula because the Air Force made it possible" is just a mite too condescending. Surely there is glory enough in the Korean campaign to go around without any service pinning medals on itself.

Casualty statistics, if nothing else, show that Korea was primarily a land battle in which the Infantry and Marines did the dirty work. Indeed, Korea probably did not give a fair test of Air Force capabilities. As it was, the Air Force gave valuable tactical support and no doubt seriously disrupted the enemy's warmaking capacity. The same may be said of the Navy. Actually, with a few minor exceptions, the campaign was a good example of unification at work. It ill behooves anyone to say which of the ingredients—the gallantry of the foot soldiers, the brilliant naval landing at Inchon or strikes by the Air Force—was the most essential. They all were necessary.

General Kenney's remarks, we are confident, do not represent Air Force policy and they probably will not be taken seriously. At the same time there are disturbing reports of an effort by certain persons within the Air Force to discredit the expansion of Army and Navy forces now taking place. It would be a great mistake, the argument goes, to build up ground armies on the basis of the Korean experience when the real battle the country must gird itself for is a struggle to the death with Russia in which strategic air power would be decisive. Very probably these overtures have neither the assent nor the knowledge of the Air Force top command, but they are dangerous business—especially at a time when the Air Force itself is expanding as fast as possible. For one thing, this approach would make a mockery of efforts to build a workable collective defense in western Europe.

Upon his retirement as Army Chief of Staff, Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower remarked that the ground soldier still is the "keystone of armed effort" and that the airplane and atom bomb have no more eliminated the need for him "than did the first use of cavalry or the discovery of gunpowder." This is sound doctrine. Air power might well be the dominant factor in a future war, but it will not be the exclusive factor; balance still must be the goal. More than this, as Lieut. Comdr. Stuart B. Barber argues impressively in the Air University Quarterly, the means chosen must not be such as to defeat the end. Overconcentration on and misapplication of strategic bombing, i. e., the indiscriminate bombing of cities, could easily destroy this country's moral and psychological assets in warfare, and to no conclusive purpose. What is needed is not individual stardom, but defense teamwork. The recent unfortunate experience of the Navy ought to be fresh enough in everyone's mind to be a warning against any new aspirations to a lone wolf role.

"Ike's" Political Future

Governor Dewey has doubtless enhanced his standing with the voters of New York by declaring unequivocally that he will not again be a candidate for the Presidency. When he decided to run for the Governorship once more, it was widely assumed that he was still nursing the hope that the lightning might strike a third time in his direction. Now that he has positively thrown his support behind the nomination of General Eisenhower in 1952, the effect is to center the gubernatorial campaign upon his record as Governor instead of his assumed ambition to be President. And it is not improbable that he may win additional support from voters who would like to see General Eisenhower become the Republican presidential candidate two years hence.

More interesting is the probable effect of the statement on the political fortunes of General Eisenhower. If Governor Dewey is reelected, his support will doubtless make General Eisenhower the strongest candidate before the 1952 Republican National Convention unless the general positively closes the door to his nomination. In 1948 there was a widespread demand for the general's nomination on both the Republican and Democratic tickets, but this reflected his standing with the people rather than with the politicians. With the New York delegation and probably other Dewey supporters lined up behind him, Eisenhower would be in a wholly different position. Should Senator Taft cling to his recent casual statement that he will not again be a candidate, the general might go into the convention with support enough to assure his nomination on the first ballot. Within the last year the Gallup Poll has indicated that he is a strong favorite of both Republican and independent voters.

The big question mark is Eisenhower's own attitude. It will be remembered that he took himself out of the 1948 race with two rather positive statements. His decision was based primarily on his belief that "the necessary and wise subordination of the military to civil power will be best sustained . . . when lifelong professional soldiers, in the absence of some obvious and over-riding reasons, abstain from seeking high political office." At the time of this statement he was still Chief of Staff. Now that he is a civilian—president of Columbia University—he has adopted a milder tone. His statement yesterday says that he is not a candidate. But the question may well be: will he submit to being drafted?

Old-timers remember that Justice Charles Evans Hughes refused to be a candidate in 1916 and repudiated every effort to line up delegates in his behalf. Yet he was nominated by the Republican Convention and accepted because of his belief that no man—not even a judge—has a right to refuse a call to the Presidency. General Eisenhower expressed much the same thought in his 1948 statement removing himself from the political scene at that time. He spoke of not wishing to violate "that concept of duty to country which calls upon every good citizen to place no limitations upon his readiness to serve in any designated capacity."

General Eisenhower has also made it clear that he would instantly respond to any call by the Government to military duty, and his name has been frequently mentioned in connection with the command of the unified forces for the defense of Europe which are expected to emerge from current negotiations. One incidental result of the Dewey statement is, therefore, that it has made it more difficult for the President to choose General Eisenhower for this assignment. He would certainly be criticized for removing a potential opponent—unless the general had previously closed the door to any political future. Without such a positive step on his part, his future is almost certain to be more political than educational or military.

Surplus To Shortage

In an incredibly short space of time the problem of cotton surpluses has become a problem of cotton shortages. Last year, facing the prospect of having to take over several million bales of cotton to support prices, the Department of Agriculture laid plans for a substantial reduction in the current crop. Owing to bad weather, weevil damage, and the failure of farmers to plant as much acreage as permitted, the 1950 crop is expected to be more than two million bales short of the low 12-million-bale goal set by the Government.

Of course, the department's planners could not foresee the outbreak of the war in Korea, which has greatly increased demands for cotton at home and abroad, any more than they could predict weather conditions during the growing season. The great weakness of all agricultural production planning is the impossibility of accurately estimating consumption demands months in advance, or determining acreage yields which are affected by numerous unpredictable factors. In the present instance planning that seemed wise at the time has resulted in severe reductions in the output of cotton coincident with an increase in demands. The Government has had to take the unprecedented step of restricting cotton exports to all countries (except Canada) to not more than two million bales during the eight months ending March 31, 1951.

Although this limited quota will not satisfy the requirements of ECA countries, shipments have to be cut to insure an adequate reserve supply of cotton of the grades required for domestic use. At the beginning of August, the cotton carryover was estimated at 6.7 million bales. The new crop will bring available supplies for the current crop year to approximately 16.6 million bales. Domestic mill consumption is expected to absorb from 10.5 to 11 million bales, leaving six million bales or less to meet export requirements of two million bales and provide for the carryover. And experts consider a four-million-bale carryover no more than a safe minimum.

The Government has also abandoned plans for acreage control and is aiming to raise the next crop output to about 16 million bales. There is no question as to the need for raising production rights. Nevertheless, legislators from the cotton States are indignant at the action of the Department of Agriculture for taking steps that might lead to reductions in the ultra-high prices prevailing for cotton. Senator Eastland charges that limitations on exports will depress cotton prices for the benefit of textile mills, at the expense of cotton farmers, and Senator Johnson of South Carolina opposes abandonment of production controls, although he admits that adjustments are needed. We think the facts provide the answer to these objectors. They confirm the conclusion that to meet the needs of military preparedness and at the same time satisfy the requirements of the civilian population, cotton must be conserved, and positive steps taken to increase production next year. Otherwise prices may soar to dizzy heights. As the president of the American Cotton Manufacturers Institute warns, "the short supply of cotton created by the shortest crop in years could lead us into a chaotic situation."

Emphasis On Peace

President Truman's recent speeches and his meeting with General MacArthur suggest that he is taking the lead in what might be called an American peace offensive. We surmise that his theme will be reemphasized in San Francisco today and again in New York on October 24 when he is to address the United Nations. It ties in closely with Secretary Acheson's address of a week ago. What it seems to boil down to is this: the campaign against aggression in Korea, the rearmament of the free world and the strengthening of the United Nations have been undertaken with no hostility toward any people and are designed only for the maintenance of peace.

The new aspect of this policy is the strength and dynamism that are being placed behind it. The free world appears to have recognized the fact that the mere institutionalization of peace and freedom, as was done at San Francisco five years ago, is not enough. It is especially significant that Mr. Truman's confidence that peace can be maintained does not rest upon any hope for a change of attitude in the Kremlin or on any sort of deal among the big powers. Rather, he said at Honolulu that the people behind the Iron Curtain must be as anxious for peace as we are and expressed determination to "get the truth to those people" without resort to arms. In other words, the peace envisaged is not the mere absence of shooting war but the dynamic pursuit of conditions under which differences can be settled and adjustments made on the basis of reason instead of force.

Soviet Foreign Minister Vishinsky lashed out at the American policy last week, calling it a means of making the Soviet Union "shake in its shoes," which, he says, it will never do. But why should enforcement of the United Nations principles against aggression, to which the Soviet has assented, cause the Moscow regime to shake in its shoes? Only a brigand nation seeking to extend its power and resources by force has anything to fear from a policy of this sort. What Moscow fears most, we suspect, is that if the free world gains sufficient military strength to save itself from aggressive attacks, the ferment against tyranny will begin to work even behind the Iron Curtain. And this, of course, is the chief significance of the two-edged weapon that the free world, with Mr. Truman in the lead, is designing.

Mere military strength on the part of the Western powers could guarantee us only against armed aggression or give us a reasonable chance to win if war should break out. This alone might produce a stalemate in which the necessity of building bigger and more costly weapons would be unavoidable. When strength is accompanied by a dynamic policy of aiding people in the attainment of peace, freedom, justice and decent living standards, however, tyranny begins to crumble. Undoubtedly this is the reason why Mr. Vishinsky is urging a return to "cooperation" among the big powers as an alternative to the forward-looking policies that the United States is sponsoring through the United Nations. In some degree Mr. Vishinsky's wailing may be regarded as a measure of the success that the strength-behind-peace policy has already achieved.

THE HAYFIELD

This garden patch that I must hoe
Is close beside a field of hay
Where ox-eye daisy and clover grow
And hawkweed lifts its yellow head,
Where blue selfheal in grass is hid;
The devil's paintbrush stains it red.
And when the wind walks through the grass
And stirs it to a lovely grace,
I stop to see its shadow pass
In lakes of dark and lines of light,
In smoke and silk—I stand and wait
To see it turn the green to white.
And very often as I go
Seeing it blow so fine and gay
I wish it might be always so
And I might keep away the day
My field is mown and left to die
And dry and brown and turn to hay.
But if one flower invade my row
I chop its head off with my hoe.

"Indecent Ordeal"

Now that Mr. Williams has been cleared of the sex charge against him, let us all repeat together that we believe in "the brotherhood of man" (his loyal friends) and "salvation through character" (his own). I have never seen Mr. Williams but from the beginning I was not able to understand how the two teen-agers could possibly have identified the sex offender in the few moments in which the act took place. Now the man who admitted the offense is quoted as saying, "I don't think that the girls could have positively identified me at the time because I know that I took them by surprise and frightened them and they ran. I don't believe that either looked me in the face."

Mr. Williams has said, "My case could happen to anybody." Yes, it could have happened to my husband or to my son or to any of the readers of The Washington Post or to just "anybody."

I do not agree with your editorial of October 14 in accusing the court of "obtrusiveness," despite the error it made and the suffering it caused an innocent person. Certainly an honest and uncompromising prosecution of an offense against the wives and daughters of the community cannot be called "obtrusiveness."

The responsibility of Judge Fennell in deciding innocence or guilt could not have been enjoyable. An easy way out would have been to let doubt overrule judgment. He cannot be condemned because of his integrity in making an unpopular decision. Lacking infallibility, the best he could do was make a conscientious decision.

Navajo Patriotism

On the front page of The Washington Post of October 16, you had an article quoting me, as tribal attorney for the Navajos, as having said the Navajos offered their lands to the Government for training purposes for the Korean crisis. This was an error based on misunderstanding.

What I said was that before the Korean war, the Navajo Tribal Council authorized me, as their tribal attorney in Washington, to ask Gen. Omar Bradley, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, to consider establishing a Scout or Signal Corps unit for the employment and training of Navajos of military age, and offered to consider the possibility of having such a unit on the Navajo reservation, if this could be done consistent with the normal uses of the reservation.

General Bradley referred the matter to the Signal Corps where the suggestion was turned down at the time, for lack of funds.

The offer of the Navajos was mentioned to your reporter to make clear their good citizenship and willingness to cooperate with their country. There was no statement made by the Navajos, as quoted in your article, in criticism of their neighbors, the Hopi Indians, for not wishing to be drafted for military purposes. In the statement I merely wished to make it clear that the point of view of the Navajos is quite different from that of the Hopis and is backed up by a long history of distinguished Navajo military service for the United States. I quoted a letter from a member of Central Intelligence referring to the splendid military service of the Navajos in the Pacific during World War II.

It ought to be made clear that the Hopi Indians are a small tribe which the Bureau of Indian Affairs numbers at 3683 members living on an area of 631,194 acres in Arizona, occupying a corner of the Navajo reservation which totals 15,444,952 acres. The Navajos are approximately 63,000 in number.

Swimming Pools

Vice-Chairman Schwab of the Recreation Board fails in his recent one-man release to discredit the success of the nonsegregated swimming project of the past summer. Why does Mr. Schwab go to such lengths as a public official to play up smaller attendance figures and extra costs while ignoring the real reasons and sociological values?

He does not reason that a part of the falling off in attendance was due to the abnormally cool summer that reduced swimming pool attendance in most areas about the Nation. He does not realize that a great many swimmers, both white and colored, did not attend the nonsegregate swimming pools for fear of troubles brought on by hoodlums and inspired by bigots during the previous year. Of course some swimmers therefore went to the two small playground pools run publicly for those who want segregation to continue.

Mr. Schwab is not informed with facts about the cost of policing. Although extra police were provided at the beginning, the policing of the pools became normal park policing long before the season was half over.

"Non-Communist Oath"

A recent work-assignment brought me to Schenectady for a brief stay. What I was told there by someone with relatives in the General Electric plant seems to have some practical bearing on the subject of your October 13 editorial, "Non-Communist Oath."

On being told that there were still many GE plants with Commie-union contracts I expressed surprise. It is difficult to know whether the explanation is entirely adequate, but I was told that there is a problem of insufficient rank-and-file control which if solved would result in change. I was told that the Commie-clique has a fair number in the union but actually a minority. That this clique arranges for a union meeting in a hall far from large enough to accommodate those who would be present. That the Commie-clique leaves work early and fills the small meeting hall. When the non-Commie employes get off from work and go to the meeting they find the hall already occupied with no place for them.

It was the impression of my informant that the employes themselves would rid the union of the leadership in question if there were a reasonable application of rank-and-file control. While this explanation may not provide the complete story of the methods by which the leadership perpetuates itself, it does suggest the possibility that indirect methods of outlawing a few of the anti-democratic procedures may be better than non-Communist affidavits for freeing the unions of Commie leadership where they have survived. However, a penetrating study might be made to see how this leadership is managing to perpetuate itself.

"Housing Credit"

Your October 12 editorial on housing credit gives some wrong impressions. You say that "even under the more restricted regulations regarding insured loans for lower-priced structures, terms are extremely liberal." Nothing could be further from the truth. The popular price bracket in Washington is $11,000 to $14,000; high wages to workmen and rising costs of all types of land and building materials, over which builders have no control, make it extremely difficult to erect a salable house here below the $9000 mark.

Let's take an $11,000 house, for example. The nonveteran pays $2700 down, plus closing costs, or roughly, $3000 minimum. The veteran gets a 10 percent differential off that, so he pays an estimated $2000 minimum. I don't see where such large down payments are "liberal." Nor do the United Auto Workers or the American Legion, or the American Federation of Labor, and countless other organizations, including the Home Builders Association of Metropolitan Washington.

What will happen to the workers displaced by unemployment resulting from these drastic curbs over home sales? Are defense industries ready to absorb them? I understand that such is not the case, that this unfortunate action was very premature.

The reason for the curbs is said to be an effort to cut down inflation and to save building materials and scarce manpower. Yet it is a proven fact that the industry itself was curtailing its own production down to the anti-inflationary level, which is the one million mark, as proven by the fact that in 1949 one million homes were erected on a declining price market, which is certainly not inflationary. Building supply leaders tell us also that materials are in better supply right now than at any time this summer and they are steadily receiving more materials from their manufacturing sources, so there will be no shortage of any materials.

The action taken by the Federal Reserve Board and the Housing and Home Finance Agency will eliminate a large portion of the veteran market here in the Washington area as it will all over the country. I don't feel this is a legitimate method in which to show their appreciation to our veterans for the services rendered their country. If the Government wanted to reduce inflationary trends, they could cut out a large portion of the unnecessary Government spending, such as pork-barrel projects and deficit financing. That is the underlying source of inflation as acknowledged by all leading economists.

Government housing leaders put on those curbs after telling the home building industry that no additional curbs would be imposed over home sales until effects of the curbs imposed July 19 were fully appraised. This pledge was reiterated to housing leaders several times in the last two months. Additional regulations such as Regulation X, are a flagrant violation of this trust and a disregard for the facts.

Government leaders know that housing volume is dropping drastically already, even before the curbs were announced. For example, housing starts in September are expected to be around 112,000, and a 20 percent drop from the August figure of 141,000. This is more than a seasonable drop, for in 1949, September starts were higher than August starts. Already applications for insurance under the FHA plan of home buying have sykrocketed downward and the plunge is continuing, another sign that additional controls were unnecessary and should be relaxed immediately.

Greece-Tito Squabbling

By Marquis Childs

In Face Of Danger

ATHENS—The total aid poured in here since 1945 has amounted roughly to two billion dollars. Of this sum, the United States has contributed about a billion and a half, which includes the American share of the cost of UNRRA.

It also includes military assistance, under the direction of the American Military Mission, to root out the Communist guerillas. Physical recovery has advanced a long way, although some Greeks feel not long enough. Some Greeks feel it has not advanced nearly fast enough and the conservative papers refer contemptuously to "aid with an eyedropper." The fact is, of course, that the need in war-shattered Greece is overwhelming.

The most important neighbor of Greece on the north is Yugoslavia, and now American aid must go there if Yugoslavia is to be saved from swift economic deterioration. That deterioration, if unchecked, will make it possible for Russia to overthrow the Tito regime by spring, perhaps even by an internal coup which would not disclose the Russian hand. Reports here indicate a serious condition resulting from the prolonged Yugoslav drought.

If Russia should make a satellite out of Yugoslavia, then Greece would be seriously endangered. With direct supply lines, Moscow could begin a major infiltration into northern Greece. It is quite possible that under those conditions Greece could not remain independent without the aid of American troops and modern military material. With Russian-dominated Yugoslavia, this could become another Korea.

IT WOULD seem, therefore, that Greece and Yugoslavia should begin to work together for common survival. The fact is, however, they are not even on speaking terms.

Recently the Yugoslavs sent an Ambassador here. The date was set for him to present his credentials to King Paul. Then, suddenly the Foreign Office canceled the appointment and the Yugoslav Ambassador went home in a huff.

Ancient quarrels between the two neighbors over scraps of land, complicated by the conflict over modern ideologies, seem to make any reconciliation impossible and gives a dream-like quality to the "independence" of the two Balkan countries that have survived the Russian steamroller. The border between Greece and Yugoslavia is virtually impassable except to the occasional adventurous traveler from Britain or America. This means that the trade in sheep and timber, so important to the Greeks, must go a roundabout way through Trieste.

One issue with tragic overtones is the return of Greek children who were taken across the border into Yugoslavia by Communist guerillas. The Greeks claim there are 11,000 children now in Yugoslav camps. The rivalry over Slav Macedonia, from which some of the children came, complicates the dispute.

Queen Frederika has proposed that as a compromise the children be sent to Switzerland in charge of the International Red Cross and there undergo an identification which would make it possible to return them to Greece or let them go back to Yugoslavia if they chose. Thus far nothing has been done and the issue remains as a constant irritant.

ANOTHER northern neighbor of Greece is Albania. Reports from there indicate that the Hoxha regime, which is a puppet of Moscow, is now extremely weak and very unpopular in the country. This coincides with reports of trouble and weaknesses in other satellites.

If Greece and Yugoslavia could only reach a working agreement, many here believe it would be possible to overthrow the Hoxha regime and thereby remove the Iron Curtain from Albania. It is after all a primitive country separated from Russia by considerable distances of land and sea.

But because the Yugoslavs and Greeks seem unable to agree, a weak puppet government probably will continue in power in Albania. From confidential reports, the familiar old Balkan masquerade is now going on there. Secret missions of every power are reported prowling through the countryside, each one engaged in a separate intrigue. This is said to include operatives of America's Central Intelligence Agency.

That was the pattern in the Balkans in the past, where king succeeded dictator and regent followed tyrant. But today the stakes are so much higher and failure cannot be retrieved.

In return for help to the two neighboring countries, it seems to me the United States should insist on a Greek-Yugoslav agreement that will make each country better able to resist Moscow. Both are proud peoples and sensitive for a variety of reasons to American intervention. But to allow ancient rivalries to stand in the way of at least minimum cooperation is a fantastic folly that invites catastrophe when an invitation is hardly necessary.

Wilson-Minor

I uphold the right of the Columbia Heights Citizens Association to go on record against the proposed merger of Wilson and Minor Teacher Colleges, but I also assert my right to demand that they, and a few others who have taken the same stand, explain exactly why, in detail. Have they gathered all the pertinent facts? Have they read and digested Dr. Hager's report? Have they conferred with and obtained the opinions of those who will be most affected? Continued segregation in these enlightened times is sinful.

Figures Are Avoided At Steel Wage Talk

PITTSBURGH, Oct. 16 (AP).—CIO President Philip Murray asked the giant U. S. Steel Corp. today for a substantial increase for his United Steelworkers but said after a three-hour conference that "no money had been laid on the table."

Big steel representatives said only that the million-member union's 1950 wage policy was presented. The company asked for a recess in negotiations until Friday, October 27. The union agreed.

Murray, who also heads the steelworkers said his 37-man bargaining team did not make a specific wage demand and that the company made no offer.

The union's 1950 wage policy calls for a general wage increase but does not set a dollar and cents figure.

The closed door hotel meeting apparently was conducted in a genial atmosphere. Before the session, Murray and U. S. Steel Vice President John A. Stephens shook hands and chatted amiably for a few minutes. Stephens is Big Steel's chief negotiator.

Industry sources speculated that Murray probably does not plan to name a specific wage demand figure until negotiations are well under way.

At an impromptu news conference after the meeting, a newsman asked Murray about reports the wage demand would be about 23 or 25 cents an hour.

Murray smiled broadly but said only:

"We live in a country of a great many reports."

Pan American Pilots Granted Wage Boosts

SEATTLE, Oct. 16 (AP). — Pan American World Airways officials announced here today a contract has been signed with the Airline Pilots Association (AFL) providing hourly wage boosts ranging from 35 cents to over a dollar for pilots.

The contract will cover 1200 pilots in the airline's system and is effective from November 1, 1950, through December 31, 1951.

Under its terms, co-pilots will receive salaries ranging from $300 to $700 a month for 70 hours work. They formerly received from $275 to $625 for 80 hours.

Pilots received no change in their basic scale—which ranged from $757 a month to $1120 for 84 hours' work—but their work month was dropped from 85 to 70 hours, with overtime for work over 70 hours.

'America Discovers Old Age'

Our Oldsters Need Preventive Medicine

(Editor's Note: The problems of "old age" are not restricted to any special age group—they are problems for all of us to live with. This is the second in a series of five articles on these problems by Dr. Martin S. Gumpert, specialist in sicknesses of the aged and author of "You Are Younger Than You Think.")

By Dr. Martin S. Gumpert

CHAPTER II

WHAT can we do to prepare for a longer life that does not mean decline and misery, but will lead us to greater enjoyment and better fulfillment of our life span?

We should maintain our civic functions throughout life, by enlarging our knowledge and by keeping informed and interested.

We should maintain our emotional and spiritual functions in order to escape the loneliness and isolation of old age.

We should maintain our skills, and even develop new skills, in order to remain useful members of our community.

And, finally, we should maintain our health because without health we cannot lead a full life.

MODERN medicine is convinced that the unhappy liaison between old age and disease is something that can be avoided.

So far, the amazing prolongation of our life expectancy is mostly due to a radical reduction of infant mortality during the last decades.

The rows of small crosses in our churchyards, indicating the great number of children who died in their infancy, are no longer growing. Victory after victory has been won in the battle against infectious diseases, many of which are now completely eradicated. But very little progress can be observed, thus far, in the fight against our chronic ailments.

THIS situation is changing before our eyes.

Medicine has now turned with great vigor against the chronic and so-called degenerative diseases which threaten our later years. It is true that we have yet to conquer cancer. However, the steady increase in cancer frequency can be explained by the facts that: (a) people who would formerly have died of pneumonia or other infections now live to die of cancer, and (b) our methods of cancer detection have so much improved.

We have not yet solved the riddle of arteriosclerosis and increased blood pressure. And heart disease is now our Enemy No. 1, to which almost every second person succumbs. However, research has advanced greatly in clearing up this dark corner of medicine, and it can be expected that its results will soon benefit the practice of medicine.

We have all heard about the surprising success of treating arthritis with extracts of the pituitary gland or the adrenal glands. These substances have only just been made available to medical practice.

Very few people die of arthritis; however, this crippling disease affects almost nine million citizens of our country, and its long and deleterious course threatens the social and economic existence of countless families.

THE older person has now been recognized as an excellent surgical risk.

Only a short time ago a man of 80, suffering from a malignant growth, would have been given up as a hopeless case. Today, we know that wit hour improved methods of preparation, of blood transfusion and of anesthesia, very old people often survive operations better than the middle-aged ones.

Our mental institutions and asylums are still filled with thousands of aged who get very little if any medical help, but some progressive psychiatrists have lately turned their attention to the treatment of these so-called senile mental afflictions and have found that they respond favorably beyond any expectation.

IN FACT, we see that wherever the pessimistic medical attitude turns into an active interest in the older patient we are rewarded by success.

Looking forward, then, with optimism, to medical advances in the treatment of our chronic ailments, we must realize that chronic ailments, as we face them today in old age, are always the product of a long, slow development that started at a much earlier age.

Most of our degenerative diseases have their onset between the ages of 30 and 40. This is the time when they can best be arrested, brought under control, and cured.

Most of us see our doctor today, only in an emergency. The agony of pain, or the inability to keep on working, drives us to his office. This emergency treatment must be changed into preventive medicine.

EMERGENCY medicine tries to cure where help has often come too late. Preventive medicine attempts to prevent the dvelopment and the outbreak of disease.

Most of us see our dentist at regular intervals whether we have toothache or not. The regular check-up by a general physician would fulfill the same purpose for our whole organism.

The old type of family physician is coming to be appreciated again, a physician who not only is an expert technician handling his tests, but who also knows his patient as a friend, knows his family, his background, and his worries, and knows beforehand what kind of physical and mental danger must be avoided in order to keep him a healthy and happy person.

ing board's directive would be carried out. He said McCullough has not been chief of police at either the Miami or Cicero tracks "for years." Recently McCullough has been employed by a firm which has track parking concessions, Johnston said.

Meanwhile, the crime committee's chairman, Senator Estes Kefauver (D., Tenn.), returned to Chicago. He will resume hearings Tuesday in the Chicago phase of the Nationwide crime inquiry.

Investigators for the committee today questioned two members of the Illinois House of Representatives and asked them to bring in business and personal records covering the last 10 years.

The representatives are James J. Adducci and Robert Petrone, both representing Chicago dis-Districts. They are Republicans. The two men were accompanied by Louis Rago, a West Side undertaker who supervised the funeral of Al Capone in 1947.

Police Aide Quizzed In Philadelphia Probe

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 16 (U.P.). Assistant Police Superintendent George F. Richardson today denied that he told the Senate Crime Committee that Harry (Nig) Rosen was a key figure in this city's numbers racket.

Called before public safety director Samuel Rosenberg to explain alleged statements before the committee over the weekend, Richardson also denied stating that gambling operates virtually out of control here.

Richardson was called on the carpet for 43 minutes concerning statements made Friday to the committee headed by Sen. Estes Kefauver (D., tenn.).

After Richardson left the office with face flushed, Rosenberg announced that Richardson "denied having made statements to the crime committee that Rosen is a key figure in Philadelphia's numbers rackets, or is active in the managemept of Philadelphia numbers gambling."

Rosenberg said Richardson also was questioned about the letter the detective chief sent to the Greater Miami Criminal Commission 15 months ago. Richardson said in the letter that Rosen, whose real name is Harry Stromberg, controlled a large part of the gambling in this area.

Rosenberg said that by that assertion he did not mean that the "city of Philadelphia was included."

"He repeated several times that when he referred to the Philadelphia area he meant surrounding sections," Rosenberg added. "He said he did not know of any tie-up which Rosen had with local rackets."

The crime committe had said before leaving for Chicago that its members were convinced that there was a large and open numbers racket operating here, apparently with police protection.

She's Active Nurse

Youngster of 82 Sees Planes As Improvement on Surreys

© The Washington Post

Mrs. Lottie Lee arriving at National Airport to visit daughter

A pioneer woman flew in from Oklahoma on her first airplane trip yesterday, beaming: "Oh, it was wonderful. I wouldn't have missed it for anything."

Wearing a red rose, Mrs. Lottie Lee looked a smart sight younger than her 82 years as she climbed from the American Airlines plane and into the arms of her daughter, Mrs. Morris Groder of 1825 New Hampshire ave. nw.

Remarkable fact about Mrs. Lee is that at her age she's still an active nurse—one of the oldest in the country. She had pulled away from her hospital duties at Cordell, Okla., long enough to try this new form of travel.

She pronounced it a decided improvement over the surrey with the fringe on top she used to ride around Oklahoma at the turn of the century.

"Now I'm going back this same way!" she immediately informed her family on alighting from the plane. "From here on this is my way of travel."

Mrs. Lee spoke as an aficionado of various ways of getting from one point to another. When she was a mere 79 her daughter made arrangements for her to come here by train for a visit.

Mrs. Lee showed up on a bus, having traveled three days and three nights on it and looking as fresh as that red rose when she arrived.

"I wanted to see the country," she explained to her daughter, and that was that.

When she heard her mother was coming by plane this time, Mrs. Groder knew that was that, too. But she politely inquired whether Mrs. Lee didn't think she might have trouble on this unaccustomed method of travel.

"No," Mrs. Lee wrote back, "but if I do, I'll just act old and people will take care of me."

Her fellow passengers didn't need to take care of Mrs. Lee. She was the darling of the flight from the moment she stepped aboard. No one would believe this silly story that she's 82.

Business Told of Good Outlook But Warned of Inflation Peril

BOSTON, Oct. 16 (AP).—A group of the Nation's business leaders were told today they could expect good business for at least a year—but heard a warning this country is headed for "economic disaster" unless inflation is checked.

The twenty-second annual Boston conference on distribution opened on an optimistic tone as Chairman P. A. O'Connell, Boston merchant, predicted:

"It appears reasonably certain that business in general will be good for at least a year as a result of full employment and high wages."

The dangers of inflation were cited, however, by Dr. Paul H. Nystrom, president of Limited Price Variety Stores Association and a professor of marketing at Columbia University.

"We in this country are in an inflationary wave at the present time," he said. "In many respects it looks worse than any previous inflation that we have ever had."

Nystrom said the remedy for inflation was simple—"turn off the spigots that produce money and turn on the energies that produce more goods and services that people want."

He called for repeal of the 75 cents an hour Federal minimum wage law and abolition of the 40-hour work week providing for time and a half for overtime as ways of stepping up production.

He added "I am not even sure that all businessmen want it (inflation) stopped."

"Playing with more and more dollars is exciting fun," he said. "Playing with inflation is almost as smart as rocking a boat full of kids on a Sunday school picnic."

Adaption of production—in quality and quantity—to the needs of the market was stressed by Robert F. Elder, a former vice president of Lever Brothers in charge of marketing.

He said failure to do this was "the most important single cause of excessive and wasteful distribution costs."

The importance of big business and the need for explaining its role to the public were emphasized by Louis B. Lundborg, vice president of the Bank of America, San Francisco, who said:

"No enterprise should be attacked just because it is big, if it has grown big because it served the public better, and because the public demanded more of its services."

Moch Departs With U. S. Ideas On Cutting Defense Deficit

and will have the greatest number of foreign troops stationed on her soil.

Officials familiar with the rearmament of the North Atlantic Treaty partners would rate the French and Norwegian performance higher than the British, Danish or Belgian and certainly higher than the Dutch, who are actually proposing to reduce their defense spending compared to last year's.

In these circumstances, Administration leaders here are not taking too tragic a view of Moch's stubborn refusal, up to now, to agree to the use of German units in a combined army.

Moch has not budged an inch on this issue, as far as could be determined yesterday, and is hardly in a position to budge at this time. He and his government face a hard time in the National Assembly debate which begins today, and they feel they dare not accept a principle which might topple their government.

The hope here is that the French Assembly will not tie the government's hands, and that an acceptable formula can be worked out by the time the Defense Ministers of the 12 treaty nations meet here on October 28.

On one point Moch did get definite reassurance from the United States. This was the willingness of American authorities to speed deliveries of arms and equipment to Indo-China, where the French forces had to abandon still another frontier outpost yesterday.

The Americans are insisting that the new deliveries go to the native army which the French are trying to build up in Indo-China. The French would like the new weapons for their own forces, but they have promised strenuous efforts to create a native army, and they will be expected to keep their promise.

Yesterday's meeting of Ministers was restricted to a small number of high-ranking officials on both sides. Finance Minister Maurice Petsche plans to stay here a few days more, and will resume his financial discussions today.

Paris Assembly to Face Heavy Business Calendar

PARIS, Oct. 16—(NYHT)—The French Parliament reconvenes Tuesday after 2½ months' vacation to fix its attitude on German rearmament, one of several major questions that make the order of business the most heavily charged calendar the National Assembly and Council of the Republic have tackled since the liberation.

Government opposition to the United States proposal for forming 10 West German divisions finds an ample majority back of Premier Rene Pleven and his Cabinet on this point.

It seems likely, therefore, that the debate on the German arms issue will center on the extent to which Germany's heavy industries may help the Atlantic Pact states to construct their own armed forces.

Other major issues before the parliamentarians are the Cabinet's approval of increasing the compulsory military service from 1 year to 18 months; the conduct of the Indo-Chinese war, which has resulted in severe reverses for the French and Viet Nam troops; a new law governing next year's general elections, and approval of the 1951 budget before December 31.

The 1951 budget is the biggest problem. The biggest single item is armament. The government contemplates spending 850,000,000,000 francs ($2,428,000,000) next year on expanding the armed forces. It is reported to be able to raise only 580,000,000,000 francs ($1,657,000,000) itself. The difference, $771,000,000 is being asked of the United States.

Hemisphere Press Group Visiting D. C.

Nearly 140 newspaper publishand editors from the 1950 Inter-American Press Conference arrived in Washington yesterday for a two-day visit.

They were tenedered a luncheon at the Willard Hotel yesterday by the four Washington newspapers. In the evening they were guests at a reception at the Pan American Union Building at which the Organization of American States was host.

Today's scheduled activities for the newspaper executives—most of them from Latin American nations—include a luncheon at the National Press Club. At 6 p. m. Edward G. Miller, jr., assistant Secretary of State for ... American Affairs, will entertain them at a reception in the Mayflower Hotel.

The Inter-American Press Conference's business meetings ended in New York Friday. One of the conference's important decisions was to reorganize on the basis of individual delegations rather than delegations by nations.

Tom Wallace of Louisville was elected president of the organization. Montevideo, Uruguay, was selected as the 1951 conference meeting site.

wholesale prices of its men's robes approximately 10 percent and suggested a similar retail boost.

Middishade Co., Inc., men's clothing manufacturer, raised the retail price of its suits to $65 because of high raw material costs.

Manhattan Shirt Co. raised prices on its spring lines of dress shirts by 7½ and 13 percent, on sport shirts by 14 percent and pajamas 15 percent.

On the other hand, Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Co. and Grand Union Co., retail grocery chains, reduced the retail cost of their various brands of bag coffee by 2 cents a pound.

In his interview with the news magazine, Symington expressed the belief that certain selective price controls on individual items might have a very "constructive" anti-inflationary effect. He believed that they were possible under the existing law, and that their imposition would not force general controls.

He expressed the belief that the hours of labor could, and would have to rise; that more women would be drawn into the labor market; and that production of many materials—such as copper and steel—would have to be increased.

He repeatedly reverted to the difficulties of obtaining high caliber people to work for the Government at this time, especially on stabilization problems. He declared, however, that he did not believe in the institution of dollar-a-year-men—those who retain their private business salaries while working for the Government.

"I think a man ought to be willing to give up a higher salary to work for his country (at a Government salary) in a time of danger like this," he said.

in raids and accept bribes from "notorious gamblers."

The indictment was filed before Circuit Judge William A. Herin. Bond was set at $1000.

Sullivan appeared with an attorney and demanded that the warrant be served at once. He refused to talk with newsmen.

FBI Asked for Protection

Meanwhile, special jury counsel Robert Givens, jr., called on the Federal Bureau of Investigation to provide a guard for George Patton, former deputy for Sullivan and wartime OSS officer.

Patton, who last week "spilled everything" to the grand jury about Miami gambling, was being guarded by jury investigators. One of them, Floyd Miner, reported to Givens that he was shot at last night. The jury attorney said he reported the incident to the FBI but not to the sheriff's office, "for obvious reasons," nor to local police "because of the jurisdictional problem involved."

The former deputy's testimony was "largely" responsible for the indictments against Sullivan, Givens said.

Profits Divided

Patton is under subpena by Senator Estes Kefauver to testify before his crime investigation committee One of the counts against Sullivan said the sheriff had permitted Patton and another deputy to split $233 they seized in a gambling raid.

Sullivan was charged with neglect in five counts, one of which said the sheriff had permitted deputies raiding gambling houses to force operators to comply with demands "which notorious criminals were making . . . (for a) share in the profits."

When the Kefauver committee met here last July Sullivan testified he went into the sheriff's office in 1945 with only $2500 in assets but was worth about $75,000 by 1948.

Dyer Quits as Cardinals' Manager, Job Left Open

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

THE WONDERS of television which offer the stay-at-home fans a 50-yard line look at the big football games are now beginning to hurt those schools which can neither peddle their video rights nor offer compelling attractions.

At almost the last minute last week, Penn State and Syracuse gave up the unequal battle of competing with the fan-interest in the televised Army-Michigan game and switched their contest to Saturday night.

Povich

And up in Philadelphia, where Penn and Dartmouth used to fill Franklin Field's 70,000 seats they drew only 37,000. The fans had their choice of (1) going to the ball game, (2) watching from their living room or (3) switching their TV sets to Army-Michigan, if they preferred.

Georgetown and Maryland were hurting, too. If ever a contest was supposed to fatten on local interest, that one did. Yet only 8869 customers showed up at Griffith Stadium to watch the conquerors of Michigan State battle a fired-up Georgetown team. The television set stayed home.

FOR THE GRADUATE managers who have to worry about gate receipts, the show on TV is too good. The cameras bring the action closer to the viewer than any seat-holder could possibly buy. The only game that television doesn't hurt is the sell-out attraction like Army-Michigan or Army-Navy.

Even as baseball television made ghost towns of such as Newark and Jersey City, which were under the guns of video broadcasts from New York's three major league parks, the smaller football schools are suffering. The coaxial cable has amounted to a creeping paralysis of attendance figures.

Radio merely whetted the appetites of the football fans, kept few away from the parks and actually made fans for the game. TV is satisfying their interests to the point where they are content to take their football in their parlors.

The fan who saw it on television concedes nothing to the fan who was there. In fact, he can properly boast that he got a better look at the game. Radio made football fans. The video casts are making TV fans.

IT IS BEGINNING to look like a distinct disservice to college football that such as Army and Michigan and Notre Dame are doing when they sell their television rights. The big schools are mopping up nicely in the fiscal department with hefty money from video sponsors, but it is at the expense of scores of other colleges whose attractions are blanketed by fan-interest in the big games.

One of the charms of college football used to be the local-interest attractions with each sector able to count on heavy turnouts for traditional games. That's out now. The fan who used to be Siwash or Wabash-minded now gives the television section a quick riffle to see which big game he'll watch in his own home.

At that, the televizing of the nationally-important games may not be without some kind of a blessing. It will leave big-time football to a few select schools, and get the others back on a more sane basis. Perhaps it will even give the game back to the players, with the smaller schools no longer able to pay high-priced coaches, erect stadiums that are too big, and continue the high competitive bidding for prep school stars.

THE PROS are playing it smarter in the video league. They are cashing in on the television rights and at the same time capitalizing on local interest with their own special plan for handling the TV problem. They don't permit their games to be videoed within 50 miles of the scene, thus compelling the customers to pay up at the ticket wicket if they want to see football.

In the pro league on Sunday, the five games drew more than 150,000 fans, and there was revenue from television as well at points where it wouldn't hurt the attendance. The pros have managed to have their home crowds and the television receipts, too, which is a nimble sort of trick.

Major League baseball hasn't suffered from television for quite a different reason than the colleges. Their game doesn't lend itself to such a splendid show as football on television. The cameras can't cover baseball action with the wonderful intimacy they can bring football into the parlor. As one big league owner is fond of saying, "if baseball ever gets too good on television, we'll cut it out."

Contest Winner Sees Duke-Terps

MARYLAND VS. DUKE in Durham, N. C., on Saturday afternoon, October 28.

The winner of The Washington Post's Football Contest this week will receive two tickets to the Maryland-Duke game as well as first-class, roundtrip transportation for two persons.

Duke last week defeated North Carolina State, 7-0. Maryland meets State in the Terrapin homecoming game at College Park this Saturday. Duke has won three out of four this season, losing only to powerful Tennessee, while Maryland is among the Nation's top ranking teams. So the Duke-Maryland game in Durham should be one of the best games of the 1950 season.

Coaches Rate Army First, Terps Drop To 11th Spot

By Leo H. Petersen

NEW YORK, Oct. 16 (U.P.).—Army's powerful football squad, working on a string of 23 games without defeat, retained its ranking as the Nation's No. 1 team today, scoring 335 out of a possible 350 points from the country's outstanding coaches.

Oklahoma and Southern Methodist changed places. Oklahoma stepped into second and SMU went down to third while Maryland, ranked eighth last week, dropped out of the first ten to the eleventh spot.

How They Rank:

FIRST-PLACE VOTES IN PARENTHESES

Team	Points
1—Army (28)	335
2—Oklahoma (2)	279
3—Southern Methodist (6)	249
4—California	161
5—Kentucky	159
6—Stanford	120
7—Texas	100
8—Ohio State	90
9—Washington	76
10—Notre Dame	60

Second 10—Maryland, 44½; Tennessee, 44; Cornell, 33; Clemson, 28; Wisconsin, 26; Rice, 19; Vanderbilt, 17; Georgia, 12; Miami, Texas A. & M. and Wyoming (1), 11 each.

Third 10—Michigan State, 9½; Illinois, 9; Northwestern, Princeton and UCLA, 5 each; Pennsylvania, 4; Purdue and Wake Forest, 2 each; Duke and North Carolina, 1 each.

Army's showing was the strongest any team made in the United Press football ratings, compiled from the selections of 35 of the coaches on the basis of 10 points for a first place vote, nine for a second and so on down to one point for 10th place.

Receiving 25 first-place votes as a result of their 27-to-6 victory over Michigan Saturday, the undefeated Cadets bettered the showing which Notre Dame made in the pre-season and first weekly ratings. In the first weekly ratings Notre Dame received 27 first place votes, but only a total of 318 points, while in the pre-season ballot the fighting Irish received 25 first place votes and 311 points.

This week, the coaches ranked Notre Dame 10th among the Nation's teams.

California was placed fourth, Kentucky fifth, Stanford sixth, Texas seventh, Ohio State eighth and Washington ninth.

Ohio State and Washington were newcomers to the top 10, replacing Maryland and Purdue.

Texas dropped from fourth to seventh with California moving up from sixth to fourth and Kentucky from seventh to fifth. Stanford dropped from fifth to sixth place.

Maryland fell to 11th place with 44½ points while Purdue, which ended Notre Dame's victory skein a week ago Saturday, fell from 10th place into a tie for 28th place with four points.

Titone's Rally Beats Ramos

By Dave Heller

Post Reporter

It was a rough evening for Featherweight Charley Titone last night.

Shifty Charley came perilously close to being put away in the third round of his 10-round bout with Luis Ramos of Puerto Rico at Turner's Arena, but he weathered the storm and won a unanimous decision before 1200.

Ramos, a strong boy packing a punch like the kick of an outraged Missouri mule, shook Titone up in the first round. Using an unorthodox right hook, he had the skinny Brooklyn boy groggy in the third.

Charley back-pedaled furiously and the bell came to his rescue. Under strict orders from Manager Jimmy Dickson to "jab him and move," Charley cut up Ramos with a lightning left for the next five rounds and avoided all in fighting. He won by a narrrow, but definite, margin.

In the semifinal, Coley Wallace, hard hitting New York heavyweight added the District's Ben Harrison to his list of victims scoring a knockout in one minute and 28 seconds of the fourth round of their scheduled five-rounder.

Jimmy Balderson made an auspicious start in his first pro fight scoring a 57-second first round knockout over Welterweight Johnny Fields in an all local bout.

In other preliminaries, Tommy Bohak decisioned welterweight Jimmy Sewell; Jimmy Briscoe got the nod over welterweight Frank Ball and, in an action-packed five-rounder, sharp-punching Holly Mimms decisioned former All-Army Champ Johnny Pratt.

NEXT FOR NAVY—Southern California will turn loose half a dozen fast, hard-running backs against Navy in Baltimore Saturday, chief among whom are Johnny Williams, left, and Al Carmichael. Coach Jeff Cravath of the Trojans says Carmichael has a chance to become the best back Cravath has ever coached. Carmichael was All-America in junior college, also played for the El Toro Marines while in service. Williams is a former Compton Junior College star.

Terps Face Double Jinx In N. C. State

Maryland must conquer a double jinx Saturday if it is to win its homecoming day football game at Byrd Stadium.

The twin bugaboos facing the Terps are North Carolina State and the single wing offense, which State employs.

In two meetings with the Staters since Jim Tatum took over at Maryland four years ago, the Terps squeezed by once and were held to a scoreless tie in the other, although they were heavy touchdown favorites each time.

The Wolfpack battled Maryland to a scoreless draw in the last game of the 1947 season. Last year, in Raleigh, guard Dave Cianelli raced 47 yards with an intercepted pass to bring the Terps a 14-6 triumph.

Coach Beattie Feathers' teams have always been known for their great defensive ability and this year's club seems to be no exception. The Staters slipped up once this season, losing 27-0 to Clemson. They held North Carolina to a 14-7 score and lost to Duke in the final period last Saturday, 7-0.

Maryland's finest and worst hours in the last four years have been against single-wing teams.

Their two biggest victories—34-7 over Michigan State two weeks ago and 20-7 over Vanderbilt in 1947—were against single-wing teams.

Maryland's greatest defeats during the same span—49-20 and 19-0 by North Carolina, 19-0 and 13-12 by Duke and 34-0 by Vanderbilt—were also against single wing teams.

IN SHORT—More than 2000 members of Maryland's Air Force ROTC unit will parade into Byrd Stadium and execute several drills on the field Saturday beginning at 12:55 p. m. . . . Halfback Mighty Mo Modzelewski worked out for the first time in a week yesterday. He and Tackle Ray Krouse will probably be ready to go full speed against State.

From Box Office Standpoint Justice Is Best Thing for Redskins Since a Guy Named Baugh

By Morris Siegel

Post Reporter

From a box office standpoint, Charlie Justice is undoubtedly the best thing that's happened to the Redskins since they added Sammy Baugh to the payroll 13 years ago.

Yesterday, shortly after the fabled halfback signed a three-year contract, ticket sales for Sunday's Redskins-Chicago Cardinals game at Griffith Stadium picked up considerably. Many of the requests were from North Carolina, where Justice is regarded as an idol.

The hotel where Justice will live in Washington reported it was reserving 41 rooms for a delegation of Justice fans from North Carolina. Six North Carolina newspapers will cover the professional debut of the 26-year-old star.

Even the Griffith Stadium concessions people are moving in on the act. Remembering the Maryland-North Carolina game of two years ago when thousands of Tar Heels waving the Stars and Bars converged on Washington, they're stocking up on Confederate flags.

Barnee Breeskin, leader of the Redskins' tepee band, was busy yesterday rehearsing "All the Way Choo Choo," the song several Carolina students wrote about their all-time favorite.

Except for the color of his new uniform and the number on it, Choo Choo will probably feel very much at home. He'll be wearing burgundy and gold instead of blue and white, but the familiar 22 which he wore through four years of stardom at Carolina, will not be his.

Harry Dowda, a rival of Justice's at Wake Forest three years ago, will continue to wear the number. Justice will probably wear Howie Livingston's old uniform. To make room for Justice, the Redskins yesterday asked waivers on the veteran Livingston, a defensive halfback.

Livingston's departure from the Redskins leaves the locals with exactly nothing to show for their trade with the New York Giants three years ago. In 1947 they sent Chuckin' Charlie Conerly to the New Yorkers for Livingston. Today Conerly is an established star while Livingston is looking for a job.

Hoyas Lose Art Gulla

By Jack Walsh

Post Reporter

They weren't as happy as you'd think at Georgetown yesterday despite holding mighty Maryland to 25-14 when nearly everyone expected the Terps to win in a romp.

"We're still a losing ball club," Coach Bob Margarita said, "and we've go to do something about it."

The Maryland loss was the third straight for the Hoyas. They still have to face six formidable opponents, beginning Friday night at Boston College, their old jinx.

Georgetown came out of the bruising Maryland game in fairly good physical condition with one

Football Teams Gross $400,000 In Doubleheader

DALLAS, Oct. 16 (AP).—Four schools stand to slice a $400,000 melon—the receipts from the gigantic football double-header held here Saturday between the Universities of Oklahoma and Texas and Southern Methodist and Oklahoma A. and M.

Oklahoma and Texas each will receive $90,588.93 from a gross of $200,446.26, State Fair of Texas officials said today.

Unofficial estimates place the split for each school in the SMU-Aggies game at between $76,000 to $80,000 from a gross of $179,000.

American Legion Sponsors President's Cup Game, Dec. 9

A post-season "President's Cup Football Game" will be played December 9 at Byrd Stadium on the University of Maryland campus between "two of the top football teams in the country," American Legion officials said yesterday.

Charles R. Garity, commander of National Cathedral Post No. 10 of the American Legion, general chairman of the game, said that President Truman has agreed to donate a cup to the winner of the game, which will be sponsored by the District of Columbia Department of the American Legion.

A committee of Washington sports writers will be asked to submit suggestions for the teams to be invited. At a press conference held yesterday to announce the game, Maryland and Army as possible opponents were prominently mentioned.

Dr. H. C. Byrd, Maryland University president who agreed to the Legion's use of Byrd Stadium, said he would be opposed to the Maryland team playing in the game if the Terps are in line for a major bowl game.

Dr. Byrd also said Legion officials told him they were prepared to offer "between $10,000 and $15,000 apiece" to two of the country's leading teams.

Maryland, which went to the Gater Bowl game last January, received $35,000 for that game. Teams receive almost three times that amount from major bowls.

The December 9 date was set, Garity said, because it was only one week after the close of the regular season and the participating teams would be in top playing condition. It would not prevent any team from accepting a bowl bid, he said. Net proceeds from the game will go to the Legion's veterans' welfare fund.

Garity said that President Truman voiced his approval of the game through his aide, Maj. Gen. Harry S. Vaughan, prior to his departure for his Wake Island conference with General Douglas MacArthur.

Hemsley, Rochester's Keane May Be in Line

ST. LOUIS, Oct. 16 (AP).—Affable Eddie Dyer stepped down as manager of the St. Louis Cardinals today and said good-by to baseball.

Fred Saigh, the club owner, said he has "an open mind" and won't decide on a new manager until perhaps early in December.

Dyer held the job five years. The first year, in 1946, the Cards became world champions. The next years they were runners-up in the National League. But this year they dropped to fifth place for the first time since 1938.

So the old colonel, Dyer, bowed out in accordance with what he called the "precedent" of changing managers after a disappointing season.

A source that said early in the month Dyer would go claimed his successor would be Managers Johnny Keane of Rochester or Rollie Hemsley of Columbus.

It was something less than a surprise to the fans, of whom a great many have been howling "down with Dyer," although Saigh did say it caught him with no plans for a new manager.

Outsiders Considered

Saigh said he would "just as soon" appoint someone from outside the large Cardinal organization "if he meets the qualifications."

Dyer said he was going back to Houston, Tex., where he has built up business interests in oil and insurance. He said he had no baseball job in sight.

Dyer read his resignation statement to a news conference in Saigh's office as Saigh looked over his shoulder.

Making a point that the statement was his own, that he brought it up from Houston last night, Dyer sat on the arm of a chair and read with some feeling:

"Realizing that a precedent has been set with the St. Louis Cardinals whereby it is customary to change managers whenever the club has a disappointing year, I want to go on record that I am not a candidate for the job of managing the Cardinals in 1951.

"In my opinion, neither Mr. Saigh nor I was responsible for the second-division finish of the club. I do not believe any club in the National League could have suffered as many and as costly injuries as we did and still finish in the first division." But that, he said, was not offered as an alibi.

As to the possible successors to Dyer:

Hemsley, who is 43, managed Columbus this year to third place in the American Association, won the playoffs and defeated Baltimore in the Little World Series.

Last year he took over a Nashville team picked to finish 'way down in the Southern Association and won the pennant, the playoffs and the Dixie Series. He was a major league catcher from 1928 through part of 1947.

Keane, 39, hasn't played major league ball, but he has nine years of experience as a manager in the Cardinal minor league organization. At Rochester this year he finished first in the International League but lost out in the playoffs.

Hoyas Avenge Terp Loss—In Ping Pong

Georgetown defeated Maryland, 4-2, in the first round of the Eastern Intercollegiate Ping Pong League last night at Georgetown. In the feature match, Vince Nyham and Don Power of Georgetown defeated Louis Balbach and Joe Moffatt, 6-4, in doubles.

Catholic University, George Washington and V. P. I. begin play Thursday.

William Klemm—The Washington Post.

AT TOUCHDOWN CLUB—Football players who starred in recent games were honored at the Touchdown Club's weekly luncheon Monday along with Charlie Justice, just signed to play with the Washington Redskins. Players of The Week, as selected by The Touchdown Club and The Washington Post, left to right: Bill Brawner, Landon Prep; Justice; Ralph Sita, Eastern High, and Joe Hitselberger, Georgetown University.

3-Year-Olds Run in Pentagon Feature as Laurel Opens Today

1st Program Lists Race For Jumpers

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

Three-year-olds will be spotlighted on today's opening program at the Laurel race course. None of the eight assembled sophomores will get any votes for "horse of the year" but they should provide plenty of action. The test of a mile and a sixteenth is the Pentagon, a $4000 purse affair.

The Baltimore-owned Bobanet Stable is expected to provide the favorite in Attention Mark, due to carry top weight of 116 pounds. He seems suited by the route and is reported fit. Chief competition is likely to come from S. W. Labort, jr.'s Arcave, which has had more experience over this track than any other member of the field.

Mrs. H. S. Clark's Puppet is formidable and will have more than scattered backing. Others in the lineup are F. A. Piarulli's Miss Triumph, and Mrs. H. Simms' Pretty Witch, coupled in the betting; Pentagon Stable's Djinn, C. B. Bolin's Alfadur and O. L. Nyberg's Ida C.

Four stakes will be run during the 13 days here. The lineup includes Wednesday's Maryland Futurity; the Washington Handicap, the Selima Stakes and the Chevy Chase Steeplechase. The richest of these tests is the filly-exclusive Selima with $25,000 in added money.

Post time for the first race will be 1:30 p. m. with the daily double as usual on the first and second races and closing at 1:15.

Special trains on the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad will serve the track from Baltimore and Washington while a number of regular trains also will make trackside stops in addition to the stops at the Laurel regular station.

From Washington, the track also will have special bus service and for motorists parking space for more than 6000 automobiles is available. A new cutoff, which takes through traffic away from the center of the town of Laurel, is now in operation and this is expected to relieve congestion which formerly hampered those driving to the track.

Colonials in Lofty Spot

GW's Bo Rowland Coach of the Week

For putting together his longest winning streak at George Washington and his team's impressive 42-7 victory over VPI, John H. (Bo) Rowland is The Washington Post's coach of the week.

The affable Arkansan took this latest honor in stride. Asked Bo, "What is it, my turn?"

Bo Rowland

That VPI win was GW's best offensive display in five years and was the third straight for the Colonials after a 19-0 loss in the Virginia opener. They also defeated VMI, 15-12, and West Virginia, 21-14.

For the moment, GW is in a triple tie for the Southern Conference lead. Even the most optimistic don't expect Rowland to keep his team in contention with engagements with strong Wake Forest, Maryland and South Carolina coming up. He might surprise one, or possibly two of them, though.

Underneath that dry wit and deprecating way he chooses to talk about his "po' little boys," there's plenty of football coach in the owlish Rowland.

Bo never had a losing season until he took the GW post three years ago. His first year he won four of 10, including the school's first victories over Virginia and Georgetown.

Last year, he won four of nine, again taking the arch-rival Georgetown, 28-7. Now Bo has a mark of 11 and 12 and has a good chance of going over the .500 mark this year.

Some of Rowland's coaching skill was apparent in the smooth performance over VPI. He's found his best blocking combination in Dave Shiver and George Semkew. Shiver was a defensive end last year.

That's an old trick of Bo's, converting men where they'll do the most good. Two top pass-snagging ends, Charley Jones and Charley Butlers are former wingbacks. Fred Samuelson, former blocking specialist, now is an offensive fullback. Rowland has Lou Ciarrocca blocking now, but he's ready to turn him loose as a runner one of these days.

You can bet Rowland will be doing his best to come up with right combination against Wake Forest Saturday. For the record, though, he says he's glad he's being selected this week before those Deacons get a chance to claw his "po' little boys."

Rowland will appear on Bob Wolff's show 6 p. m. Wednesday on Station WWDC.

lamentable exception. Soph Art Gulla, No. 1 left halfback, hurt early in the game, will be out at least a month and possibly the rest of the year.

Technically, Gulla's injury was diagnosed as a fracture of the transverse process of the lumbar spine. Explaining it for a layman, Trainer Joe Kuczo said that the breaks are in the second and third bones that protrude horizontally from the spine.

Gulla, only a 165-pounder, has been a good tough little back for Georgetown. He scored the first touchdown in the Penn State opener on a 10-yard off-tackle thrust. Next to Gino Pagluica, he's been the team's best ground gainer.

Big disappointment for him is that he's been looking forward to playing against Boston College, of all games. The 18-year-old is from Norwood, Mass., just outside Boston.

Bugs Thompson proved against Maryland that he certainly will be a capable replacement for Gulla. Trouble is Bugs is such a defensive standout, they'd like to rest him a little on offense.

It probably means Jack O'Mahoney will be used more. O'Mahoney is a brilliant soph prospect from Pittsburgh. He's the boy something like 32 colleges sought. Then, too, Dick Doyle, at right half, looks like he's going to be quite a runner.

DEAR FOLKS: AT LAUREL

This track will offer the only steeplechase racing in Maryland. Many of the top timber horses are on the grounds. Trainers Jack Skinner and Arthur White shipped in their charges over the weekend. The Maryland Futurity is shaping up as a first class race with Miss President and Miss C. O. D. here after a trip from Belmont. Despite the "cheap horses" rule here, the first race of the meeting drew 12 eligibles, four also eligibles and 137 other entries. Mother Nature again has added to Laurel's beauty with the multi-colored painting of the trees along the backstretch. The opening of the new by-pass road through the town should help move the racing crowds. The popular young trainer Tommy Smithson has been called by the Army. His horses have been turned over to his grandfather, Tommy Rodrock. See you on the rail.—BILL.

Have Won 3, Have 3 Easy Ones Left

Barclay's W&L Boys Have Almost Clear Sailing to Conference Title

By Herb Heft
Post Reporter

UNLESS A FIRST rate upset occurs, Washington & Lee is in a great spot to win its first Southern Conference football championship in 16 years.

George Barclay, who left Maryland two years ago to become W&L head coach, has guided his Generals to three league wins already and has only three weak sister teams left to play: Richmond, Davidson and V. P. I.

George Barclay

Maryland, if it wins all six of its league games, will tie the Generals, but the Terps have a rougher path to hoe: N. C. State, George Washington, Duke, North Carolina, V. P. I. and West Virginia.

Duke plays seven league games and could conceivably win it also, but the Blue Devils must knock off Carolina, Wake Forest and Maryland to do it.

Wake Forest also plays six Conference games, but the Deacons have unbeaten Clemsen, Duke, N. C. State, George Washington to face yet.

Not even Barclay is saying that his team is in the same class with such other Conference powerhouses as Duke, Maryland, North Carolina and Clemson.

Still, George is proud of his club and rightfully so . . . especially after its showing against Virginia last Saturday.

Gil Bocetti, the McKeesport, Pa., magician who runs W&L's split T formation, guided the Generals to a 21-13 lead over two-touchdown-favored Virginia with 12 minutes left. Then two unfortunate breaks cost the Generals the game, 26-21.

With 11 minutes left, W&L safety man, Dave Waters accidentally committed interference against Virginia's Gene Schroeder on a desperate fourth down 45-yard pass by Rufe Barkley, and the Cavaliers were given a first down on W&L's 15. The Cavaliers scored, cutting their deficit to one point.

Bocetti was doing a fine job of protecting that slim margin, keeping W&L in possession of the ball. Needing only to keep the ball for another minute and 45 seconds, Bocetti unaccountably threw a third down pass. He saw it intercepted at midfield, and turned into a game-winning touchdown on a 45-yard Barkley to Gerry Furst Virginia pass.

Barclay took Bocetti off the hook yesterday. "I will say Bocetti is the cleverest T quarterback in this neck of the woods. It wasn't entirely his fault that he made that pass. He asked me first if it was okay. I said, 'sure.'

"There was only a minute and a half to go, a long pass was almost the same as a kick since we were around midfield, and if we couldn't hold Virginia at midfield for a minute, we didn't deserve to win."

Caps Get Otten With Pay Hike

The Caps upped the ante yesterday to regain Don Otten, seven-footer who performed for them last season.

Otten previously told the Caps he wouldn't be back and planned to play with the Louisville Knights of the rival National Professional Basketball League.

General Manager Bob Foster went to Otten's home at Bellefontaine, Ohio, and changed his mind with an offer of a salary boost. Don signed for a year. He will report for practice today.

Coach Bones McKinney also announced the release of two men, Joe Bradley and Harry "Trees" Taylor. Bradley joined the Caps after the Chicago Bruins were disbanded. Taylor, 6-foot-6, played with North Carolina College.

Robinson KOs Rindone in 6th

BOSTON, Oct. 16 (AP).—Welterweight Champion Sugar Ray Robinson, priming himself for a middleweight title tussle with Jake LaMotta, knocked out Joe Rindone of Boston, in 55 seconds of the sixth round of their scheduled 15-round boxing bout tonight at the Boston Garden. Robinson weighed 156½ and Rindone 160.

3 Beatings In Row Bring Resignation

BLACKSBURG, Va., Oct. 16 (AP).—Robert C. McNeish bowed out today as head football coach at Virginia Tech after two and a half years in which his teams won only one game.

His resignation was in the form of a letter to the school's athletic council. It was made effective today.

The council accepted McNeish's resignation and appointed Freshman Coach Allan Learned to finish out this season as temporary coach of the Gobbler eleven.

Learned's appointment was on recommendation of McNeish, the council said.

A graduate of Southern California, McNeish came here in the fall of 1948 from the United States Naval Academy, where he had been serving as backfield coach.

During his tenure, Tech teams won one game, tied three and lost 18. The team this year dropped its first three contests—61-21, to Quantico Marines; 45-6, to Virginia, and 42-7, to George Washington.

McNeish told his VPI squad before the George Washington game last Friday night that he planned to resign if the team lost. They did—and he did.

Out of the Daily Mail:

Dear Sir:

As you no doubt know by now, there is no ice skating in Washington, D. C., this year, Chevy Chase Ice Palace having gone in for TV, and Uline more interested in other ventures.

Titleholder Donald Laws, junior men's United States figure-skating champion, has to look for another place to practice in order to enter competition this year. It's rather pathetic that our first titleholder in "singles" has to look to another city for ice skating and instruction.

Donnie has the chance to compete this coming March against Dick Button, U. S. senior men's champion and world champion, since he is now eligible to enter seniors, having won the junior event, but he has no place in D. C. to practice. Donnie is also eligible to enter the world figure skating championships.

Washington, D. C. has many ice skaters, not all of them figure skaters either, but in the last few years the Washington Figure Skating Club has done all right for Washington. The coveted Harned Trophy, awarded in the national figure skating championships to the club winning the most number of points for competitors placing in the United States national figure skating chmapionships, was won by the Washington Figure Skating Club in 1946, 1948 and 1950.

It really is a shame that D. C. skaters, who have worked so hard to make a name for Washington, have no place to skate.

Soooo, on to Baltimore, once a week, on a chartered bus (or buses if a lot of our club members stick with us) to skate on Sunday mornings at the Sports Center on Charles st. Let Baltimore get the money on skating, ice skating equipment, food, etc.—not Washington. Nevertheless, the Washington Figure Skating Club die-hards will stick by Washington and fight hard to continue making a name for D. C. as a darned good bunch of skaters, even if they haven't any ice.

Sincerely, E. B. W.

P. S. Our champions for Junior Dance, first place, Carol Ann Peters and Danny Ryan, are practicing at Lake Placid and will enter Senior Dance this year. The United States championships will be held in Seattle in March.

Charles Fights Nick Barone

NEW YORK, Oct. 16 (AP).—Jake Mintz said today Ezzard Charles had agreed to defend his world heavyweight boxing title against Nick Barone of Syracuse in a 15-round bout at Cincinnati November 28.

Charles will receive 42½ percent for his fifth defense and his first home appearance since he won the championship, Manager Mintz said.

Negotiations are under way for a return bout in case Barone should win the title. Barone whipped Jimmy Beau in a 10-rounder at St. Nicholas Arena Friday night. He moved into the Charles bout when Freddie Beshore of Harrisburg, Pa., refused terms for a return battle.

The Federal Diary by Jerry Kluttz

Lists Being Compiled For Possible Moving Of Government Offices

Several important steps have been taken that could lead to either dispersion or further decentralization, or both, of Federal activities here. They are:

1. Secret lists are being compiled of Government offices here that could be (a) moved to other parts of the country, and (b) dispersed to nearby Maryland or Virginia.

2. The Budget Bureau has moved squarely into the decentralization-dispersion picture. Lee Martin has been brought back into the bureau on a consulting basis to make recommendations on the problem.

3. General Services is making a Nation-wide survey to locate both office space and housing where Federal offices and employes could be moved, and,

4. Several agencies here, such as Army, Navy, Air Force, Commerce, and Interior, are giving serious thought to moving some of their activities and people from here to other cities to make room for their growing defense operations.

This much you can be sure of—the Government today doesn't know wether to launch a decentralization or dispersal program, or a combination of the two. Furthermore, no one knows for sure now whether the plan to disperse some Federal offices here to new communities within 25 miles of this city will be re-presented to Congress when it returns late next month.

Congress insisted on details that weren't available when the plan was unveiled several weeks ago. That's one of the several reasons why no action was taken on it at that time. Among the things Congress wanted to know was which agencies would be dispersed, and that's why a tentative list is now being compiled.

Lee Martin will coordinate the decentralization - dispersal study and make recommendations on policy matters. Shortly after he retired as chief of Budget Bureau's estimates division about two years ago he stayed on for about three months to work with the National Security Resources Board to help develop what finally emerged as the dispersal plan. His return to the Budget Bureau will speed up decisions on what agencies here should be moved and where.

Meantime, the Federal office space problem here has reached the critical stage. A dozen Federal agencies are demanding that General Services find space here to place upward of 10,000 employes. About all GSA can tell them is to push their desks closer together and to place more people in available space. Very little new office space is to be had.

LABOR: Its Wage & Hour Division won't have the staff expansion it had planned. A million dollars of its appropriation for salaries and expenses has been recaptured by the department to apply against its share of non-defense savings ordered by Congress.

NOTES: George J. Aitken has been appointed budget officer of State's Point Four program. . . . Winthrop M. Southworth has been appointed special assistant to Assistant Secretary of State Edward Barrett. . . . In case you want to make vacation plans, Thanksgiving will be November 23, and not November 30 as marked on many calendars. The State Department soon will get out a proclamation making the 23d official.

UNAPOC: Another important Federal employe union has gone on record for a permanent salary boost—the independent United National Association of Post Office Clerks.

At its St. Louis convention, the UNAPOC also urged: a 5-day, 35-hour work-week; 26 days annual and 15 days sick leave for postal workers; 15 percent night differential; overtime pay for Saturday, Sunday, and holiday work; and lump sum payment at death or retirement for all accumulated sick leave.

William C. Armbrust was re-elected president of the union. The secretary-treasurer job of Tom Bussier, who retired, was split up between Bernard J. Moore of Altoona, Pa., who was elected secretary, and Samuel E. Klein of New York City was named treasurer. They will all have offices at headquarters here.

School's Ban On Bi-Racial Performance Held Correct

Board of Education Subcommittee Calls Officials Right in Sesqui Show Row

By Elsie Carper
Post Reporter

It's against the law for Negro and white mixed groups to appear during school hours in District public schools, in the opinion of a committee of the Board of Education.

The special committee, by a 2-1 vote, said that school officials acted within the "spirit" of the District segregated school law when they banned Sesquicentennial actors from the stage of Anacostia High School.

The committee was appointed to find out why 12 white and two Negro performers were turned away from the school September 19 when they appeared to present scenes from "Faith of Our Fathers."

Members also were asked to prepare a policy to guide school officers in similar situations. Committee recommendations will come before the full board for approval at Wednesday's meeting at 3:30 p. m.

The "policy" resolution approved yesterday states that the committee "being bound by law recommends to the board that the board obey the law in its specific instructions and in its spirit."

Presented by Dr. Gannon

The recommendation was presented by Dr. James A. Gannon, who also introduced the motion indorsing the action of Mrs. Opal Corkery, principal of Anacostia, who banned the actors, and Dr. Hobart M. Corning, superintendent of schools, who backed her.

Adelbert W. Lee, chairman of the committee, voted with Gannon. Woolsey W. Hall, newly-appointed Negro board member, dissented.

In support of his two resolutions, Doctor Gannon declared that "segregated schools are a fact. It is the duty of the administration to carry out not only the letter but the spirit of the law as Congress laid it out. Congress said there will be no intermingling."

In a lengthy review of the "Anacostia incident," Dr. Corning reported the actors were banned from Anacostia because of "tensions in the neighborhood." These, he said, were "due to the swimming pool situation during the last summer and to the bus difficulties a year before."

Bus Fights Cited

Dr. Corning referred to the Anacostia swimming pool where white attendance has dropped markedly since it was thrown open to mixed swimming, and to fights that occurred on buses between students of white and Negro schools.

Dr. Corning said that Mrs. Corkery "has been informed by some of her students since the morning of the scheduled performance that had the program gone on, there would have been trouble from the audience."

The "number of calls received at Anacostia and at school headquarters seemed to indicate an effort was being made to create a considerable incident," Dr. Corning said.

The calls included one from Police Superintendent Robert J. Barrett asking "what the disturbance had been."

Dr. Corning said that the agreement with the Sesquicentennial Commission had been for white actors only to appear at Anacostia.

He said, however, that some members of the Sesquicentennial staff refused to present an all-white cast in the school program.

Court Sidelight

Refugee Gets Taste Of U.S. Mercy

The Washington Post
RUDOLPH ARON
. . . assault charge dropped

A 44-year-old German refugee who left Paris just ahead of Hitler's legions, yesterday found that American justice is tempered with mercy.

Rudolph Aron, 44, 4526 Stanford st., Bethesda, who operates Rudy's Newsstand on Wisconsin ave. near the Hiser Theater, might have lost his chance for citizenship had he been convicted of a simple assault case yesterday in Bethesda Police Court.

Aron was found guilty of striking the 8-year-old son of Dr. and Mrs. S. R. Bauersfeld, 5018 Elm ave., Bethesda, when the boy lifted a tarpaulin from the newsstand to look at a comic.

Trial Magistrate James R. Miller found Aron guilty but Defense Attorney Walter H. Moorman rose to tell the court this might keep him from the citizenship he has been looking forward to for nearly five years.

Assistant State's Attorney Thomas M. Anderson said he didn't want to stand in the way of the man's citizenship, even though he felt the conviction was warranted.

Judge Miller then said:

"Any punishment I would impose would be trivial compared with the indirect punishment of denied citizenship that might follow. Let's let him be the kind of a citizen I feel he hopes and wants to be." He dismissed the case.

Aron, native of Koenigsberg, Germany, was a magazine writer in his native land, until obliged to flee in 1933.

Aron then went to Paris, where he joined the staff of a German-language magazine devoted to exposing the aims of Hitler.

D. C. Gets 3 Bids On Blue Plains Sludge Burning

The District yesterday received three bids, ranging from $691,446 to $834,780, on a contract to provide equipment to burn sludge at the Blue Plains sewage treatment plant. Officials said the low bidder will be named after each bid has been evaluated.

The equipment will not directly help abate pollution of the Potomac, Harold A. Kemp, director of sanitary engineering, said. But it will provide a means of disposing of additional sludge when new treatment facilities are provided in about two years.

Congress has authorized spending of $1,875,000 for the sludge-drying equipment and a building. Kemp said the facilities should be ready about 15 months from the time the contract is signed.

Civic, Business Leaders Ask Less Tax, More Spending at D.C. Budget Hearing

School and Health Requests Stressed By 43 Spokesmen Before Commissio

By Richard Lyons
Post Reporter

The District Commissioners were asked yesterday to spend more and tax less next year.

Forty-three spokesmen for business, civic and other groups made pleas for their favorite projects or fields of municipal activity at the annual budget hearing in the District Building board room.

Some wanted more spending for schools, health and welfare. Some wanted lower taxes. (Real estate and personal property taxes were the favorite targets). Some wanted both more spending and lower taxes—the difference to come from greatly increasing the Federal payment.

Working from yesterday's testimony and conferences with department heads, the Commissioners must now whittle the 154 million dollars asked by department heads down to the money available. Without taking anything out for surplus or emergencies, this is expected to be 132.5 millions.

Small Gathering

The day-long hearing drew a small gathering that never exceeded 50 persons.

The proceedings were familiar. Most speakers were there because their requests had been turned down or only partially fulfilled the previous year. They read their prepared statements and went about their business. There was no discussion. No one asked a question expecting an answer.

Only one person appeared as an individual citizen—rather than as a group representative. That was Mrs. J. Austin Stone of 3039 44th st. nw., who supported the request of the Minimum Wage and Industrial Safety Board for four additional inspectors.

Both the Federation of Citizens Associations and the Washington Board of Trade asked for tax cuts. Federation President Herbert P. Leeman urged reduction in the real estate tax rate from $2.15 to $2 per $100 assessed value and abolition of the tangible personal property tax except on motor vehicles.

Wants Federal Aid

To make up for the tax cut Leeman would have the Federal Government pay 40 percent of District expenses and also pay for the zoo, the National Guard and St. Elizabeths Hospital. He supported increased spending for police, fire and welfare departments and the public library.

Board of Trade Spokesman John A. Reilly urged cutting taxes so as to assure no surplus at the end of fiscal 1952. He specifically called for abolition of the personal property tax on household furnishings and urged less spending because of the uncertain times.

To offset a reduction to $2 in the real estate tax rate, Rufus S. Lusk, president of the Washington Taxpayers Association, suggested putting one policeman instead of two in a scout car and not filling vacant jobs where possible.

The North Washington Council of Citizens Associations (claiming to represent 150,000 persons) called total budget requests "incredible." It asked that the Commissioners seek authority to borrow money to finance school construction and opposed an increase in public assistance funds.

Calls Requests Too High

The Building Owners and Managers Association said it thought the budget requests too high, the Federal payment too low and the personal property tax something to be abolished. The Federal Government should pay 25 percent of District costs, it said.

About a dozen speakers favored partial or complete abolition of the personal property tax. The Commissioners have given general approval to a plan to repeal the tax on household furnishings.

Increased spending proposed by the school, welfare, health and recreation departments was supported generally by most speakers.

Woolsey W. Hall, president of the Federation of Civic Associations, gave blanket indorsements to 90 millions asked by the welfare, police, fire, sewer, sanitation, school and water departments and the courts.

Approves School Request

The League of Women Voters asked approval of the full 34-million-dollar school request and urged funds for a Northwest health center and for a statistical division at Juvenile Court.

Like several other groups, the league asked that the city seek authority to borrow money for permanent improvements. The argument advanced was that persons who benefit from the schools and hospitals in future years should help pay for them.

The need to bring public assistance payments into line with present day—instead of 1946—costs was stressed by a number of groups. Russell W. Schneider, speaking for United Community Services, said welfare grants now allow a person only about 30 cents a day for food.

Request of the Minimum Wage and Industrial Safety Board for additional inspectors drew support from both union and management—the Washington Central Labor Union and the Washington Building Congress.

More Than Sought

In some cases speakers urged more spending than the departments asked. The Hospital Council of the National Capital Area asked that the city pay volunteer hospitals $12.50 a day, instead of $11.25 requested by the Health Deparment, for the care of indigents. The Glover Park Citizens Association asked for a $75,000 field house where the Recreation Department intended to spend less than half that amount.

Segregation in schools and recreation was blasted as too expensive by several groups. They included Americans for Democratic Action, Women's Auxiliary of United Public Workers, the Progressive Party of the District and its Southeast Club and the Consolidated Parent Group.

The District Bar Association urged approval of 17 additional clerks for Municipal Court.

The Connecticut Avenue Citizens Association and the Cleveland Park Community Library Committee asked $275,000, more if needed, for a Cleveland Park library.

Additions of classrooms and staff at the Health School were supported by the school's P-TA and the Cerebral Palsy Association of Washington.

Would Recruit Wardens

Civil defense was considered most important by the Metropolis Citizens Association. It suggested the District call on citizen groups to help recruit block wardens.

The Junior Chamber of Commerce urged approval of $50,000 to extend the auto driving training programs to all high schools.

The Council of Pre-School Play Center Mothers asked for additional staff members.

A library east of the Anacostia River was indorsed by the Fort Davis Citizens Association.

Additional Funds

The District Department of the American Legion asked for additional welfare funds. So did Hillcrest Children's Village and the Children's Country Home for Convalescent Children.

Completion next year of the 2½-million-dollar Piney Branch relief sewer was urged by the Columbia Park Community Club. It is set up as a five-year project with $300,000 appropriated this year and $700,000 asked for next year.

The Mid-City Citizens Association indorsed borrowing for school building, higher Federal payment and abolition of the personal property tax.

Additional recreation facilities in northern Washington were requested by the North Washington Recreation Council.

Increased spending for schools was urged by the following: The District Public Schools Association, the District Congress of Parents and Teachers, The Progressive Citizens Association of Georgetown, The Washington Highlands Citizens Association and The Janney P-TA.

Democratic Council Supports H. B. Pair for Court Position

The District Democratic Central Committee is expected to reaffirm its indorsement of Hubert B. Pair for appointment to the Municipal Court Bench.

Several Capitol and legal sources indicated yesterday that the 45-year-old assistant corporation counsel is most likely to succeed Emory B. Smith, who died of a heart ailment Sunday while preaching a sermon.

Smith, a Negro, served only 13 days before his death.

Pair, also a Negro, was the choice of Democrats last Spring when Negro leaders split over the two candidates.

The close rivalry and near equal support for the two men was one reason why President Truman delayed several months before finally nominating Smith.

The Democratic Central Committee meets today, and one leading member said Pair's candidacy is "almost certain to come up for reindorsement."

Pair, a resident of Washington most of his life, is a graduate of Terrell Law School. In 1942 he became the first Negro assistant corporation counsel.

Another candidate is Ernest Branham, a Justice Department attorney. He was sponsored last spring by Senator Olin Johnston (D., S. C.), a lifelong friend.

Court Adjourned Early In Memory of Smith

Municipal Court adjourned at noon yesterday in memory of Judge Emory B. Smith, who died preaching a sermon Sunday after only 13 days on the bench.

Judge Armond W. Scott held memorial services in his courtroom at 12:30 p. m., in which tribute was paid to Judge Smith by Chief Judge George P. Barse and others.

Judge Scott told a crowded courtroom "there are many vicissitudes in trying to be a judge, especially for one of our race in the District of Columbia. Judge Smith was a man of great emotion and did not have the physical stamina to withstand the terrible vicissitudes."

A lifelong friend of Judge Smith, Judge Scott is now the only Negro justice on the bench in Washington.

Funeral services for Judge Smith will be held at 2 p. m. Thursday in the Lincoln Congregational Temple, 11th and R sts. nw., where he had been pastor from 1915 to 1923.

The Rev. Robert R. Brooks, present pastor, will preside at the funeral. Burial will be in Lincoln Cemetery.

Attorney Henry Lincoln Johnson, representing the Washington Bar Association, said that Judge Smith was "too soon lost," after achieving an ambition of 18 years when he was appointed.

Judge Ellen K. Raedy said that Judge Smith "achieved what he most wanted to achieve before he passed away."

Judge Barse told the assembly that Judge Smith had always impressed him as a lawyer.

"His death is a distinct loss to the court," the chief judge said. "He would have been a fine judge."

Two Children Among 3 Hurt In Accidents

Three pedestrians, two of them small children, were injured yesterday in Washington traffic accidents.

Norman L. Gupton, 59, of 921 F st. ne., was struck, police said, at 9th and F st. ne. yesterday at 8:10 a. m. by an automobile operated by William T. Black, 23, of 6 W. Mount Ida ave., Alexandria, Va.

Gupton was admitted to Casualty Hospital with a possible fracture of the left hip, both hands and left wrist. Hospital officials said his condition was "favorable." Black was charged with failing to yield the right of way to a pedestrian.

Sylvia Peck, 3, of 327 11th st. sw., and Stewart L. Story, 4, of 303 11th st. sw., were injured, police said, when they ran across the street in the 300 block of 11th st. sw. yesterday at 1:25 p. m.

Police said they ran into the path of an automobile operated by William H. Worthington, 38, of 1943 Bennett pl. ne. Both were treated at Children's Hospital. Sylvia was treated for face cuts. Stewart, with a possible concussion, was in good condition. No charge was placed against Worthington, police said.

Montgomery School Teacher Is Reinstated

Reinstatement of Miss Cecelia Moody, teacher in the East Rockville Elementary School, whose "resignation" was protested by 44 parents, was announced yesterday.

Superintendent of Schools Edwin W. Broome said that Miss Moody will not return to teaching classes until Wednesday, but that she had been reinstated yesterday.

The parents had asserted that Miss Moody's resignation had been forced merely because she had not followed exactly county regulations on teaching reading.

Dr. Broome said the incident was the result of a misunderstanding.

Alexandria Annexation Case Opens Today in Fairfax Court

A three-judge tribunal will convene in Fairfax Circuit Court today at 10 a. m. to begin hearing Alexandria's annexation suit for 7½ square miles of Fairfax County.

The jurists will be Judge Paul E. Brown, of Fairfax; Judge Jeff Walter, of Accomac, and Judge Walter T. McCarthy, of Arlington. They were designated by the Virginia Supreme Court to hear the suit. In Virginia, annexation courts consist of one judge from the circuit in which the case is tried; one from a neighboring circuit, and one from a "remote" area.

It will be the second annexation case involving Fairfax County in four months. In July Falls Church lost its legal fight for 10.75 square miles of county land.

Alexandria wants sparsely populated, undeveloped land to the south and west of the present city. The added territory is needed, Alexandria contends, to permit development of industry now tightly bottled up because virtually all land within the city has been occupied.

At least two "large property owners" in the annexable zone have thrown their lot in with Alexandria. Attorney Armistead L. Boothe said yesterday he had been engaged by Mark Winkler and Paul T. Stone, owners of more than 400 acres in the disputed area, to press for annexation.

On the other hand, Alexandria officials were notified last Friday that some 500 residents of the area have signed petitions as intervenors objecting to the annexation.

The annexation, if successful, would more than double the size of Alexandria, which occupies about 7.3 square miles.

The court has allotted a full month for hearing of the case, although attorneys speculate it may be completed in three weeks. Most of today's opening session will be devoted to a tour of the disputed zone by the three judges and attorneys for both sides.

163d Polio Case Of Year Reported

The District Health Department recorded yesterday the District's 163d poliomyelitis case of the year—a 22-year-old woman of the 800 block of 7th st. ne., who was admitted to Gallinger Hospital October 14. At this time last year 88 cases had been reported.

In Fairfax County, the health department reported its forty-sixth case of the year—a 14-year-old girl of Route 2, Fairfax, who was admitted to Gallinger on October 14.

Arlington Builder Indicted On Grand Larceny Charge

Lucian M. Downing, an Arlington home builder, yesterday was indicted for grand larceny by the county grand jury in connection with a house a customer said Downing promised to build but never began.

Downing, who lives at 3712 N. 18th st., was one of 12 persons indicted. He also faces 13 civil suits for sums totaling $12,700.

The builder pleaded innocent. Trial was set for December 13. The warrant was sworn out by Herman L. Croom of No. 2 Ashby st., Alexandria.

Bond of $20,000 was requested yesterday by Arlington Commonwealth Attorney Denman Rucker on one man indicted for armed robbery and on his brother, accused as an accessory in the case.

Joseph G. Lewis, 29, of 1519 Park rd. nw., was indicted for armed robbery in the March 13 holdup of Mrs. Marguerite Lee, 2700 S. June st., Arlington. Mrs. Lee, wife of former gambler Blight Lee, was robbed of $86.

Lewis' brother, Paul C. Lewis, 36, of 3718 S. 3d st., Arlington, was indicted for being an accessory. Bond on a third man, George W. Kiley, 26, of 332 Ridge rd. se, indicted for armed robbery in the same case, was continued at $3000.

Rucker said the $20,000 bond was requested in order to keep the Lewis brothers jailed until their trial. Rucker said Kiley had testified before the grand jury. Hearing on Rucker's bond request will be heard in Circuit Court at 10 a.m. today.

Also indicted was Joseph DeMarco, 30, of New York City for grand larceny in the September 7 theft of jewelry from an Arlington woman.

The jury failed to indict Fort Myer Pfc. Louis D. Wertenberger, 25, of manslaughter in the traffic death August 13 of Pfc. Albert A. Rawls, 22.

Clyde E. Williams, 18, and Earl Lafayette Huffman, 24, both of 1216 14th st. nw, were indicted for the $130 armed robbery of an Arlington filling station on July 28.

A 19-year-old youth has been arrested by Odessa, Tex., police in connection with the holdup of a Western Union branch office here here on October 10.

He is Billy Neal Creager, who was picked up by Texas police Sunday on information furnished by Washington police. They said he is wanted in connection with a $83.50 holdup of aW estern Union office at 3027 Nichols ave. s.e.

Police said they traced Creager's connection in the case because he had been sentenced to serve a sentence of from 16 months to four years for the holdup of a Western Union office at 725 15th st. se., on April 30, 1948. Creager and a companion, both soldiers at Bolling Air Force Base, took $163 in that theft, police said.

They traced him to this month's holdup after they learned he was on parole from the Federal prison at Chillicothe, Ohio, and had visited his young wife and child here on the night of October 10. They learned he left for Odessa on the following day.

Odessa police said Sunday night that Creager had waived extradition to Washington.

It's a small world, and that is why, according to police, Calvin C. Peyton, 25, was indicted on four burglary charges yesterday.

On May 25, $69 worth of clothing was stolen from Eddie Muldrow, proprietor of a cleaning establishment at 1406 N. Capitol st. Last month, one of the stolen suits was brought around to Muldrow's establishment for cleaning. He recognized the suit, and learned that it had been purchased from Peyton, according to police.

Questioning Peyton, the officers also charged him with taking $100 additional from three other addresses after he broke in them.

This was among 17 indictments returned by the District grand jury in District Court.

In another case, Ernest F. Pearson, 26, of Philadelphia, was charged with assault on special officer Daniel Wolff, 22, at the Washington Terminal. According to the court papers, Pearson was shot in the leg when Wolff drew his revolver when asaulted.

In the fight, Oliver Davis, 26, of 1316 Wallach st. nw., was shot fatally. Wolff was exonerated by the coroner's jury.

The dispute centered over whether Davis could park his automobile on a loading platform at the terminal, police said.

Arthur E. Henry, 54, of Hollywood, Calif., was charged with larceny after trust of $2325 from Francis X. Meehan, 514 Decatur st. nw. The money was supposed to be used

Girl Who Lost Her Memory Is Identified

Police yesterday established the identity of a 16-year-old girl who wandered into Doctors Hospital Sunday night and told officials she didn't know who she was.

She has been identified as Margaret Welch, 16, of 6503 E st., Maryland Park, Md., a drug store clerk. Police said she will remain at Gallinger Hospital for several days under observation.

According to police, the girl on one earlier occasion appeared to be confused and upset.

Policewomen traced her identity from a soda fountain clerk label, with her name on it, which she carried in her purse when she went to Doctors Hospital.

D. C. Pressmen Seeking Berry Estate Share

Washington printing pressmen will proceed with legal action to claim a large part of the estimated $800,000 estate of the late George L. Berry, president of the AFL International Printing Pressmen's Union, despite the international union's decision to oppose the action.

Archie France, chairman of the National Policy Committee set up by Washington Local No. 1 and other locals to wage the court battle, said his group also will put up a new slate of candidates to oppose present international officers in elections next year.

The committee contends that Berry invested union funds in private corporations and willed to private individuals property which rightfully belongs to the union.

The Newark (N. J.), local of the pressmen's union recently announced that it had withdrawn from participation in the court action, prompting France's announcement that the policy committee will continue the fight.

The suit is now on appeal in Tennessee, France said.

Local No. 1 also is engaged in a battle with the recently chartered Local 351 for representation of 225 pressmen employed in commercial shops here. No. 1 has had jurisdiction over commercial and Government pressmen, but the division arose after the international organized No. 351. Elections will be held Wednesday and Thursday by the National Labor Relations Board.

Credit Union Cashier Held In $6000 Theft

FBI agents yesterday arrested a 34-year-old Navy Yard Credit Union cashier and charged him with embezzlement of about $6000 of Credit Union funds.

He is Daniel John Imbs, of 3441 10th pl. se., who called the FBI early yesterday morning to tell them they could "come and get him."

Imbs disappeared on August 18 from his job with the Credit Union a civilian organization at the Naval Gun Factory. Officials there said he had told friends he was going to see a sister in Wyoming. A subsequent check showed he flew to Cuba on August 19.

A formal complaint against him was filed by the FBI on August 31. Agents here said Imbs walked into the office of the United States Consul in Havana on October 14 and said he had learned he was wanted in Washington.

Imbs told the Consul he was returning here.

After his arrest by two FBI agents, who picked him up at his home at about 9 a. m. yesterday, Imbs refused to make any statement on the case.

He was arraigned before United States Commissioner Cyril S. Lawrence on a charge of embezzlement and the case was continued until October 25. Bond was set at $3000.

FBI officials said Imbs is married and the father of two children. They said he made the trip to Cuba alone.

Mrs. O'Connor, a divorcee and former clerk for the regional office of the Veterans' Administration, had left her job in August. Partial Ban On Shirley Trucks Urged

A rush-hour ban on truck traffic over the Shirley hwy. has been advocated by the North Ridge Citizens Association, largest civic group in Alexandria.

In a "statement of policy" concerning the highway traffic problem, the association has suggested that trucks be banned between 7 a. m. and 9 a. m. and from 4 p. m. to 6 p. m. The limitation, it contended, would leave the highway "free to handle an increasing load of smaller vehicles with maximum efficiency."

A copy of the statement has been forwarded to Representative Howard W. Smith (D., Va.), asking that he assist the group in its efforts to bring about the restriction.

The statement said the membership has been "concerned" with the suggestion that the route will be open to heavy truck traffic as soon as the final two miles of the northbound lane is completed at the southern end of the road.

Because only the southbound lane is complete at that point, the Virginia Highway Department now bans struck traffic over the section of road it controls.

Night Closing Of Comfort Stations Urged

Assistant United States Attorney Warren Wilson yesterday called for the night closing of public comfort stations as breeding places of sexual perversion.

Commenting on the increase of sex offenses, Wilson said "90 per cent of these offenses are committed in men's rooms operated by the Federal governmnt."

Wilson mentioned Lafayette Park, Stanton Park, Dupont Circle and Franklin Park.

He recommended that all these comfort stations be closed as soon after 4 p. m. as policemen on the 4-12 shift could do so, and remain closed until 8 a. m.

"These stations were constructed when there were no other facilities in downtown Washington," Wilson said. "Today, hundreds of restaurants are required to have toilet facilities by law. Many hotels have been constructed since the comfort stations."

"These places are becoming cesspools of perversion," he told reporters.

Chief of Police Robert J. Barrett asked the District Commissioners to abolish public comfort stations last March.

Barrett said the stations breed crime generally.

Howsam and Johnson appeared yesterday at a 90-minute preliminary hearing with Assistant United States Attorney Warren Wilson, in charge of Municipal Court prosecutions.

Johnson said Howsam, 35, has worked as his assistant for about two years.

Cooperation Cited in War On Obscenity

Distributors of books and periodicals and managers of first-run movie houses have shown "remarkable" cooperation with police in curbing "objectionable" literature and entertainment in the District, a policewoman told a group of Catholic women last night.

Because of its "very limited" staff, however, the Women's Bureau of the Metropolitan Police Department has been unable to cover the ground as thoroughly as it would choose, said Miss Gertrude Goettel, now assigned to duty with the Sex Squad.

Speaking to about 40 members of the Moral Welfare Committee of the Archdiocesan Sodality Union, Miss Goettel said she recalls only one case in which she "had any difficulty" in persuading a book distributor to stop selling "objectionable material."

The case was taken to court and resulted in conviction of the offender, Miss Goettel told the committee, meeting at St. Martin's Club, 1912 North Capitol st.

She described many of the so-called "peep shows" on 9th st. nw., as "pretty bad," but said police have succeeded in curtailing the exhibition of obscene pictures.

"Our staff is inadequate to cover all the places we need to cover, and we don't have a chance to go back to check up," she said.

Miss Goettel then urged all members of the Sodality Union to serve as "auxiliary policewomen" in providing information about establishments that sell comic books, pocket novels and photographs which may be found objectionable.

The Moral Welfare Committee has been campaigning for a year to discourage such sales and to eradicate obscenity in radio, television and motion pictures.

$20,000 Fund Given GWU for Cancer Study

Election of officers and presentation of a $20,000 check to George Washington University for clinical work featured the fourth annual meeting of the District Division, American Cancer Society, last night.

Walter S. Pratt, jr., president of the Equitable Cooperative Building Association, was reelected president, and Dr. Harry H. Kerr, past president of the District Medical Society, was reelected vice president. Eliot Wadsworth was also named a vice president at the meeting in the Medical Society's auditorium.

Dr. Calvin T. Klopp was reelected secretary and Frederick P. H. Siddons secretary.

The $20,000 grant to George Washington university was presented to Dr. Clyod Heck Marvin, president of the institution, by Leigh Ore, of Washington, as national representative of the American Cancer Society.

For Clinic Use

The grant will be used to help maintain basic units of the university's cancer clinic in cytology, biochemistry and biology, and will also help defray costs of clinical care of research patients.

In making the presentation, Ore said that "you are particularly fortunate in the District, for more money is turned back to the District for research by the national society than is received from here."

According to the society, during the past four fiscal years, ending August 31, 1950, a total of $554,280.22 has been contributed in the District, of which 40 percent is allocated to the national society. During the same period a total of $425,874 was allocated to District institutions for cancer research by the society.

In accepting the check from Ore, Marvin told of "another step forward." Toward the Warwick Memorial Building, to be erected on New Hampshire ave. nw., just off Washington Circle, the Washington Home for Foundlings is contributing $400,000, the United States Public Health Service, $200,000, and the District, under the Hill-Burtno Act, $75,000, Marvin said.

Others Anticipated

The university president added that "we are looking forward to two other buildings, in early time." One will be used for study of the cell, and the other for diagnosis and treatment, he said. "These two buildings along with Warwick Memorial, will give us the foundation for a great cancer center in Washington."

Charles C. Koones was presented with a certificate in recognition of his service as chairman of the last fund-raising campaign, which exceeded its $200,000 goal by $111.

Joseph W. Leverenz, executive director, in a brief talk stressed the need for broadening the base of participation in the society's work, and said that he hoped that the District Division could some day occupy a building that would be a cancer headquarters.

Bladensburg P-TA Opposes Change In School Name

Changing the name of the Bladensburg High School was opposed last night by the Parent-Teacher Association at a meeting in the school.

Prince Georges County school officials had announced plans to change the name of the school to the Thomas J. Cook School in honor of a former county school superintendent and as part of a new policy of naming schools for persons instead of communities.

The parents said their children opposed changing the name and residents of a number of the 26 communities served by the school said they had no objection to the retention of the name. The group then voted to urge the school board to retain the old name.

The group also voted to ask Representative Lansdale G. Sasscer (D., Md.) to aid in the fight for a 3-cent school fare on buses.

McKeldin Charges Gov. Lane With Trickery in Tax Pledge

BALTIMORE, Oct. 16 (AP).—Theodore R. McKeldin declared tonight that Governor Lane was guilty of "a brazen, coldly calculated piece of political trickery" when he announced he would call a special session of the General Assembly to reduce the sales tax if he were reelected.

"Everyone will recognize it as the last desperate effort of a candidate who . . . now senses impending defeat," the Republican nominee for Governor added in a speech prepared for delivery by radio and television.

"He (Lane) says that if he is elected he will call the Legislature into special session," McKeldin continued. "He should have said he would do so even if defeated, if he were sincerely interested in the people of Maryland, instead of trying to get himself reelected."

Both the Democratic and Republican party platforms call for a raise in the exemption base of the two percent sales tax from its present 14 cents to 50 cents. Both would remove all foods from the terms of the tax, as well as soaps and soap powders.

Lane promised Saturday he would issue a special session call November 10 if elected.

"I can tell you, Mr. Lane," McKeldin declared, "that the people of Maryland are seriously concerned about your record of tax and tax, spend and spend."

The sales tax was adopted by the Legislature in 1947, shortly after Lane became Governor. At that time, the administration predicted it would add about $18,400,000 annually to Maryland revenues.

At that time, the exemption base was nine cents. When total collections were found to exceed the estimates, the base was raised to 14 cents in 1949. Collections are now at a rate exceednig 27 million dollars a year.

"You (Lane) told the people in February, 1947, that 18 million dollars was needed from the sales tax, and that was the amount it would produce," McKeldin said, adding:

"Why did you fail to tell the people the fact I have now ascertained, that your own advisory commission had already given you information that the tax would produce $22,500,000?

"At the same time, they pointed out to you that the experience of other States showed that the sales tax would probably produce 28 million dollars, which it has, in fact, produced."

Tydings Addresses Rally at Bel Air

BEL AIR, Md., Oct. 16 (AP).—Senator Tydings (D., Md.) said today that only after the heads of states make peace can the United Nations carry out its chief duty of preserving peace.

Tydings made the remarks in a rally here. Also addressing the rally were his running mates, Governor Lane, Attorney General Hall Hammond and Comptroller J. Millard Tawes.

"We still have been unable to make peace in many places," said Tydings. He added that the best hope for building such a peace lies in a strong United States.

"Aggressors will attack only if they think they will be successful," he declared.

There'll be Stars in Your Eyes and Hair in This Elegant Era

By Evelyn Hayes

FROM THE TOP of her head—where she will spike her chignon with a jeweled ornament—to the tips of her bejeweled opera pumps, this season's woman of fashion will wear jewelry round the clock to punctuate the chic of her costume. The blonde whom gentlemen prefer may feel that "diamonds" are her best friend—and diamond-like rhinestones are newly important in this era of elegant fashions. But certainly pearls are any girl's best flatterers any hour, any day, any season. The soft glow of pearls is everywhere—pearl chokers in single and many strands with matching button or drop earrings.

FOR EVENING AND LATE DAY, pearls are often complemented by the glitter of rhinestones. Above is one of the season's newest—a glowing collar and matching bracelet of Marvella pearls wih brilliant rhinestones between the pearls. A single pearl and a dainty chain of rhinestones from the swaying drop earring that adds to the new look of this ensemble. At Woodward and Lothrop.

FRANKLY FAKE is lots of this year's jewelry. Pictured below is an elegant necklace designed by Pierre Balmain for La Tausca—none the less elegant for its being fashioned of rhinestones and simulated pearls. Inspired by the musical instrument is this lyre necklace composed of double strands of large graduated pearls drawn inward and looped through an elaborate lyre of blazing rhinestones. This and the deep decolletage are made for each other. Together they provide an alluring design of jewels-plus-skin-plus fabric. The earrings are round, flower-like designs of paved rhinestones. Available at Julius Garfinckel.

IT'S NOT ONLY what you wear in jewelry this year, but where you wear it, that counts. Pictured above are shining stars and glitter dots pinned to single velvet leaves and filmed with veiling—to make a romantic little evening hat. A pair or stars or dots would be equally smart pinned to the hip pocket of a dress, on the cuff of a glove or on your evening purse. If you wear one alone, remember—the bigger the better! One whopping star might scintillate on a suit or a tailored coat where the collar meets the lapel. Available at Woodward and Lothrop.

New Paris Indorsement For Trumpet Silhouette

Do you know what the trumpet silhouette is? It's a slim skirt that hugs the body until just above the knees, where it breaks into fullness of some sort—pleats or flares or godets or a graceful flounce. It was started last February in Paris by Dior and Balenciaga, and is very important in our own fall fashions here.

And now, in these latest Paris openings, the couture has endorsed it over again—showing many more dresses cut along these lines. In fact Dior even thought up a pretty new name for it—"Lily of the Valley." Now we often call it the lily silhouette. You'll find this new silhouette in both daytime and evening dresses and I think you'll like it. It's young, smart, and easy to wear.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Although Her Parents Speak Well of Initiative, Girl, 18, an Only Child, Says They Make a Scene If She Does Anything Without First Asking Consent

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a girl 18 and an only child. My parents expect adult behavior and wisdom of me, and say they are glad when I do things on my own. Yet if I venture to do even the most trivial things without consulting or wheedling them, we have a scene.

I am my father's darling as long as my desires or opinions don't conflict with his; then I am a mere inexperienced child. When we differ he recognizes no appeal based on logic or simple justice The only possible approach is simpering, pleading sweetness. As a child I almost worshiped him, but now I see much of the quality I once admired as strength is simple unreasoning intolerance. He has a blind raging temper when aroused, but I must admit he seldom displays it.

Mother is most of my problem. She nags day in and day out, and I must say, without going into detail, that I feel she is becoming a bit neurotic. She feels so strangely about some things that it's hard to believe she was once a girl herself. I don't even like to make up my face when she's in sight. I am always doing it wrong; she always knows best. When I do my utmost to please her, and ignore my own wishes entirely, there is usually peace; but I can't pay that price indefinitely.

I feel inside of me that I am almost adult; that I can do things I don't even realize. Yet my parents are always there, directing, commanding, demanding what they call "respect," so that I feel utterly deprived of individual freedom of action. There is a good deal of friction between my parents, as well as between mother and me; and I know dad often sympathizes with me, but to do him justice, he sides with mother for the sake of peace.

To sum up my trouble, I feel unhappy, dependent and helpless. I know the solution of everyone's problem lies within himself; but please try to help me understand myself. R. R.

DEAR R. R.: Why do you say that "the solution of everyone's problems lies within himself?" What documentation, or what personal experience, have you to prove the statement? To be honest, isn't it a wiseacre phrase you've adopted from hearsay, without stopping to examine it closely? It were more correct to say that the solution of everyone's problems is to be found in living, if at all; and that the solution is never-ending, in the sense that so long as there is life, there are difficulties to be dealt with.

Now, speaking of understanding yourself, an understanding in which you ask help, it seems to me that the entity known as "self" is the increasing sum of one's living experience. By this definition, the self incorporates not only the autobiographical history of the individual, his actual dealings with other human beings and with physical environment; it also includes his psychological reactions to all that happened and to all that he felt. Thus it is a large order to "know thyself," and hardly possible for another to provide this knowledge for you.

Apparently you have the notion that self understanding is the antidote to trouble, or a magic way out of it. But that isn't necessarily so.

For example, a prisoner in a concentration camp might understand himself well, in terms of recollection and insight, and he might fully recognize the injustice of his predicament, and yet be unable to physically free himself. His captors might have the authority, in the circumstances, to keep him under thwarting surveillance and control. And your problem, of unwilling subjection to overly protective parents who lack wisdom in human relations, seems roughly comparable to that hypothetical situation.

Problems are solved by suitable actions, not by aggrieved philosophizing about them. The constructive purpose of self understanding is to establish habitual awareness of spontaneous impulses, feelings and tendencies, so that one may be freed from blind bondage to them, and thus give reason the controlling vote in determining what course to take.

In short, self study leads to "the more abundant life" only if it serves as a guide to intelligent behavior.

Inasmuch as your problem has to do with frustration imposed by unreasonable parents, the solution will have to wait until you are grown up, by conventional standards. When you've reached the age to be self supporting, when your formal schooling is finished and you've attained legal majority, you will have society's sanction in standing on your own feet and doing things sensibly your own way, even though your parents may fight against it. In the meantime, strive for patience in accommodating their peculiarities. M. H.

Antiques Will Supplant Apples in Winchester, Va.

WINCHESTER, Va., a town famous for ruddy-cheeked apples and the annual blossom festival, will be greeting visitors for another reason this week. Antique-lovers, history enthusiasts and sightseers will converge upon the small Shenandoah Valley town on Wednesday, Thursday and Friday for the Antique Show and Sale to be held at Christ Church, and parish house.

Antique lovers will revel in the outstanding display of old furniture, oriental rugs, rare old prints, fine glass and china brought by local and out-of-State dealers, and displayed in the buildings of the historic church, which dates to 1830. Among the notable items to be shown are Meissen and Dresden china, old Chinese bowls and pattern glass, original English mezzotints, Hepplewhite, Pembroke and Chippendale furniture, and an antique rug with 54 portraits of famous men woven into it.

History enthusiasts will learn much about Winchester's past from the exhibit arranged by the Winchester-Frederick County Historical Society. Mementoes and relics of the period from earliest Colonial times through the Civil War period will help revive the past of this region where Lord Fairfax lived and was buried, where young George Washington held a job as surveyor, and where raging battles were fought during the War Between the States.

Casual sightseers will enjoy a visit through the lovely old church and rectory, guided by local girls dressed in the taffetas and silks of another century. At snack bars maintained all during the day, they can taste real Virginia hams and turkeys and other foods popular in this region.

St. Mary's Guild of the church is sponsoring the show, which will be held from 11:30 a. m. to 10:30 p. m. all three days. Tickets are available at the door of the parish house and rectory, which is on West Boscawen st., one block from the intersection of Routes 11 and 50.

Greek Air Marshal, Chilean Admiral Honored at Capital Parties

By Marie McNair and Elizabeth Maguire

AFTER A FLYING VISIT to air bases and military installations, Air Vice Marshal C. Potamianos, Inspector General of the Royal Hellenic Air Force, dropped down again in Washington to make his adieux before returning to Greece.

Yesterday he was guest of honor at a cocktail party given by the Greek Ambassador, Athanase Politis, and on Wednesday he will take to the air again for his homeward flight.

The Ambassador, a bachelor host, seems to have made little change in the embassy since he took over in July. There are the same deep red velvet hangings in the drawing room, and the same magnificent rug which almost covers the floor of crimson patterned in black with an Oriental border.

There are, however, a number of new faces among the embassy staff. There's the tall distinguished John Kalergis successor to Paul Economou-Gouras, Minister-Counselor, who will be leaving in mid-winter with his pretty wife for a new tour of duty. There was C. Cavalieraros, whose dark-eyed wife is a real beauty, and the new Naval Attache, Capt. Panayiotis Damilatis, and Mme. Damilatis, who is concentrating on speaking English.

While it wasn't predominantly a military party there was a good sprinkling of Air Force blue in the dining room where, as usual, most of the guests finally found themselves about the buffet. I saw the Secretary of the Air Force, Thomas K. Finletter, and Mrs. Finletter in a trim black satin suit with a yellow felt cloche; the Inspector General of the Army, Maj. Gen. Louis Craig, and Mrs. Craig, and Brig. Gen. Louis Renfrow in civilian clothes with Mrs. Renfrow wearing black matelasse crepe.

THE DIPLOMATIC CORPS' DEAN, Norwegian Ambassador Wilhelm Munthe Morgenstierne, was there and Mme. Munthe Morgenstierne, in deep brown, talking to Mrs. John Farr Simmons, wife of the Chief of Protocol.

Secretary of Agriculture and Mrs. Charles Brannan had Denver guests with them—Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Woods—and the ladies were sampling the rich pastries from the sweets table.

Met handsome Andre Michalopoulos, Adviser to the Greek Embassy, who also lectures, ran a Greek Information Bureau during the war, and quite frequently is on "Invitations to Learning" on the air.

Chatted with Mrs. Morris Cafritz whose burgundy and black checked silk suit was fastened high at the neck with a turquoise pin surrounded by diamonds, a birthday gift from her husband.

Said "how-de-do" to Lea Maccas, member of the Greek Parliament, and a former Minister of the Navy, who's a visitor in town, and saw the Egyptian Ambassador, Machamed Kamil Bey Abdul Rahim, admiring the series of ancient Japanese dancing figures, 2000 years old, which had been presented to the Greek Ambassador before he left Japan.

EUGENE RIETZKE was hostess at luncheon at the Palladian Room of the Shoreham yesterday in honor of Miss Ruth Hamilton and Miss Julann Caffrey, the latter a member of the cast of "The Curious Savage" now playing at the Gayety. Miss Hamilton is godmother for Mr. and Mrs. Rietzke's 18-month-old son, Rersh.

MR. AND MRS. RICHARD VICKREY on the birth of a son, their third child on October 14 at Columbia Hospital. The baby will be christened Clarke Kimble. Mrs. Vickrey is the former Miss Betty Wheeler, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William W. Wheeler.

NOTE-BOOK NEWS:

When Mrs. Leigh Wade left October 12 for New York, her sister, Mrs. John Shugrue and the George Allens went with her. The foursome had planned to see a show and tour the night spots before Helen Wade sailed October 14 on the Ile de France with Athens her eventual destination. Just before the train pulled out of Union Station, Mrs. James Newman, wife of the General and Mrs. Harvey Smith, wife of Colonel Smith, arrived with weekend bags. "We're going with you," they announced happily. After creating sufficient suspense, the pair got off at Baltimore and returned home.

Among the first Washingtonians who can report on "Call Me Madam," which opened October 12 in New York, are Gen. and Mrs. Wade Haislip. They stopped in New York long enough Friday to see the new musical while on their way to West Point for the Army-Michigan game October 14.

Wax Makes a Fine Finish For Parquet Floors; More You Wax 'em, the Better

DEAR ANNE:

I have just sanded my wood parquet floors and am wondering about a finish. If possible, I would prefer waxing or simonizing them, rather than varnishing them. How many coats of wax would be required and would they give the floor sufficient color? I want to keep them light in tone. A. McP., Washington

Wax is a satisfactory and attractive finish for hardwood floors. The older the wax coat, the lovelier its patina and the less often it will have to be waxed except at points of heaviest traffic.

Applying the wax will darken the floor slightly. If you want to find out just how much, make a trial run with the wax in an out-of-the-way corner. If you think it's not going to impart enough color, it will be necessary to stain the floor before waxing.

But back to the waxing job: Apply a thin coat of good paste wax, allow it to dry, then polish by hand or with a weighted polish brush. Repeat with two or three thin coats. If you prefer liquid wax, follow the directions on the container. In general, liquid wax is easier to apply but must be used oftener. The paste wax penetrates better, lasts longer, and does more to nourish the pores.

DEAR ANNE:

Is there any place in this vicinity or near here that I can buy some Garbanza (Spanish) beans? Mrs. J. L. F., Falls Church, Va.

A Columbia rd. shop which specializes in Spanish foods has these either in dry form, cooked and canned, or roasted and in a cellophane bag. The telephone number is Columbia 3560.

DEAR ANNE:

I have four steak knives that appear to be made of stainless steel, except that they tarnish badly. I have tried both silver and metal polish to no effect, and fervently hope you can suggest something that will do the trick. Mrs. R. P. W. 3d, Alexandria, Va.

Use a mild scouring powder and a damp cloth. This should remove stain without harm to the steel.

Beautiful Skin Starts With a Good Cream

Tenth day of Edna's beauty program.

By Ann Lawrence

FIRST STEP IN ANY routine to bring your skin back to velvet-smoothness after exposure is to choose the correct cream.

Such a cream should be rich in oils, have slightly stimulating properties, should be light enough to be worked into the skin easily and, preferably, one which does its good work in the time required for massaging. Few women, indeed, care to sleep with a heavy grease coat on their faces.

The cream chosen for Edna . . . and remember, hers is the sensitive skin so often found with red hair . . . does combine all these qualities.

She was delighted, too, with the fragrance and embarked upon a nightly massage program.

HERE ARE THE STEPS she used: First, she applied a thin film over her entire face and neck. Then, starting at the base of the neck, she clenched her hands and used her knuckles to knead the cream upward and outward towards her ears. Rotating her knuckles as she worked up, she repeated these movements 10 times. Each movement "lifted" the skin, another step to keep facial tissues firm.

Around the mouth: Starting under her chin, Edna made strokes upward toward her mouth, all across her chin. Then she started from the center of the chin and made three circles around her mouth. This was repeated five times.

Massaging the cheeks: Starting from the outer corner of her mouth, she stroked the cream upward along her mouth and nose lines towards the inner corner of her eye. She repeated this three times, then patted gently under each eye, out to the temple. Three times on each side of her face completed this step.

Forehead wrinkles: Starting from the tip of her nose, Edna stroked upward, straight to her hairline. Then she continued working on her forehead by short upward strokes from brow to hairline, finishing with brisk cross strokes that started from the center of her forehead and worked outward to her temple. She alternated each side.

Why such pains with massage, Edna asked? Facial muscles and tissues are delicate and must be gently handled. Too-hard kneading or pulling down on the tissues defeats the purpose of massage . . . toning, nourishing and strengthening tissues . . . by weakening these muscles.

The correct steps are actually the easy ones. And Edna reported that her skin felt more alive, . . . and certainly it looked more glowing.

Germany's Satire Needed Scissors

By Richard L. Coe

ALTHOUGH IT IS far too long and consequently doughy, "The Original Sin," at the Little, has some highly amusing moments and a witty idea.

This is a German picture with English subtitles, a musical satire at its best when telling you a fanciful version of earth's creation. What a pity that it wasn't more tightly edited, for the added weight detracts muchly from the required lightness.

You're shown a man who can't decide between his wife and his secretary. He likes 'em both. He tries a mental doc to not much avail, but at long last falls asleep in the medico's chilled, moderne lobby.

This leads to a dream about earth's creation, wherein his doctor is Peter, officer-in-charge of the project, his wife is Eve, the secretary Lilith and his wife's admirer Lucifer.

Earth, it appears, is by no means ready for habitation and Peter's all for taking time on the project. At this point only Man (our hero in something that looks like a raincoat) is ready and he's by no means up to specification. The workshops have been creating a partner for Adam from one of his ribs and everyone observes certain curves and differences: "But that's the best we could do from the specifications you sent," the head workman tells Peter. Stumbling about on his own, Adam manages to crack the earth model into two pieces and there's something of a dispute about how it's to be put together. "Where do we put Berlin now?" asks Peter.

Lucifer's pressing ways get him demoted, and a full dress parade is summoned for the event —"Full-dress wings." Thus, Lucifer is now the fallen angel and he tries to lure Adam and Eve into his tawdry hell. They're not much impressed and go back to the "sample earth" which heavenly tourists find a curiosity spot.

Lucifer then sends Lilith to lure Adam into trouble. When Lilith pays her call, Eve is asleep. Manna is plentiful and Lilith is hungry, just dying to eat the one forbidden trifle, an apple. When she finally lures Adam into picking it for her, she pointedly remarks that he did it of his own free will—that she didn't make him do it.

So Peter is forced to send Adam to earth before either it or he are ready; by mistake, Lilith is at his side for the entry; Peter's rose-colored glasses allowed him to make an error.

And so it goes. There are some amusing musical numbers and spicy sequences. The actors are adept and were in the film's original, a Berlin musical comedy. This one might have been great sport if the editing department had used the cutting scissors.

"THE ORIGINAL SIN." Lovert Films release a screen play by Helmut Kautner and Bobby Todd from their musical comedy written with Kurd E. Hyne. Music by Bernhard Eichhorn. Settings by Wolfoang Znamenacek and Gunther Strupp. English titles by Herman Weinberg. Directed by Kautner. At the Little.

GOOD NEWS for the town's countless admirers of Dr. Josephine McGarry Callan . . . For some 120 plays now she's been acting coach for Catholic University's productions, but you saw her only once: in "Juno and the Paycock" . . . I missed that one, but now comes interesting news: Dr. Callan will play the title role in "The Madwoman of Chaillot," when the university group presents the play for two weeks starting the 27th . . . There was talk of a noted theater lady in the role, but it strikes me that Dr. Callan as the wonderful Countess Aurelia should be a performance well worth seeing . . . When this news came to me, the Theater Guild's Lawrence Langner was paying a call and he thought it "a splendid idea" . . . Three years ago Dr. Callan worked for the Guild on "Allegro" . . . My wife, who abhors seeing plays twice, is going to break her rule for this one just to hear Dr. Callan read those lovely lines.

BOOKINGS: "Grand Illusion," certainly one of the longest-lived of the imports, starts a three-day run today at the Pix . . . Keith's will hold "Walk Softly, Stranger" a second week . . . "Mister 880" is doing well at the Palace but not well enough to hold over; there surely must be something wrong with the movie biz if this corking comedy doesn't rate a second F street week . . . "State Secret" moves into the Playhouse tomorrow . . . "The Furies," Walter Huston's last, will, after all, be the new Capitol film.

FRIDAY NIGHTS and Saturday matinees are by all odds the town's biggest theater performances . . . The Theater Guild subscriptions for the Gayety those two performances are way oversubscribed, roughly six or seven times over, Bess Davis Schreiner reports . . . This means that the supply of certain of the favored locations, notably the front of the first balcony, simply doesn't come up to the demand and hundreds will have to be disappointed even though they made their requests back in August . . . The early part of both the two subscription weeks have some openings, but the management much regrets all the "Sorry, no seats" it's having to say . . . It's just one of those things about which nothing can be done.

SEATS for the cancelled second week of "The Barrier" should be turned in at the box office. . . . There is no way this can be done by mail, the box office tells me, so it looks as though several of my correspondents will have to make themselves a trip.

IN HAT AND PERSON: Rory Calhoun, whose new is "To Climb the Highest Mountain," will be along Thursday for the Capitol's stage show. You'll note Rory's wearing a hat here, what with the current big push to get menfolk hatted, a drive joined the other day by Big Fashion Wheel Schiaparelli, who said that women should pick out their husband's hats

'The Outsider' Visits British Public School

"The Outsider," at the Dupont, is based on "The Guinea Pig," a London stage success of recent years which concerned the problem of making the traditional English public (our private) schools less snobbish.

Because the system in question is so related to our average American scene and because both the plot and characters are little more than set-ups, the picture will not be of much interest to most Had it been more spirited, or original dramatically, it might have rated recommendation but both factors considered, it is not likely to be of general interest.

The story tells of a very Old School Tie spot whose trustees feel they must take in students whose families previously have not been associated with such institutions. The son of a tobacconist is taken in, fights his way through the traditions and snobbery and winds up as an accepted fellow with his way cleared toward a Cambridge scholarship.

Central balance between the old and the new is a young master, injured in the war; he takes the boy's side and winds up with both the daughter and position of a conservative housemaster. Robert Flemyng plays the master efficiently and Richard Attenborough is the boy.

Since the appeal of the story is largely to the English and was prompted by the Labor government's education bill, it does little more than tell you familiar outlines. The school scenes are compellingly real and the chapel sequences will certainly take back Americans who've attended similar schools in this country.

Its sincerity and quiet restraint, however, are commendable and sometimes moving and, curiously enough, in retrospect it is a more interesting argument than it seems to be while you're watching it.

Chicago Grain

CHICAGO, Oct. 16 (AP).—Soybeans had recovered today from last week's shaking out and advanced for gains extending to nearly 3 cents.

The bean market did not move up until after slumping at the start largely in sympathy with an early break in wheat. During this period May and July beans scored new seasonal lows and other contracts touched a bottom since last July.

Other cereals recovered from the morning drubbing, but not enough to put them ahead on the day. Lard followed beans into higher ground.

Wheat closed ¾-1¼ lower, corn ⅛-⅜ lower, oats ¼-½ lower, rye ⅛-⅞ lower, soybeans 1½-2¾ higher, and lard 2 to 13 cents a hundred pounds higher.

New York Cotton

NEW YORK, Oct. 16 (AP).—Cotton futures were under heavy selling pressure today and closed 40 cents to $2.15 a bale lower. Hedge selling was at its most active pace so far this season as clear weather speeded up cotton harvesting operations. In addition, there was extensive hedging against CCC cotton, estimated as high as 50,000 bales.

ADVERTISING OPPORTUNITY

Here's a chance for a college graduate to get a toehold on the advertising ladder. To start, it's only a messenger's job at $30 a week. Within a few months, the next step will be calling on the retail trade, doing merchandising. After that—probably advertising salesman, but maybe research or production or copy, depending on the man. This is really a good opportunity and we want to give it to the right man. Since it's primarily a stepping stone to selling advertising—don't apply unless you have a sales personality. If in doubt, you haven't.

Ex-Broadway Millionaires

The Glittering Canyon is a street of strange ironies. Names lighting up marquees are often poorer than the corner newsboy, have fewer friends than a stray pooch and never experience the personal happiness they inspire in public. There are more Hamlets than Cinderellas in the Great Bright Way's biography. The saga of Mike Todd is the latest chapter. The showman's name tops a leading hit, "Peep Show." He produced numerous goldmines—yet his debts exceed a million because he gambled away a fortune.

Mike's plight has the sympathy of his friends, but they are shocked by his appalling gullibility. Here is a shrewd operator—a man who should know all the angles—yet he was more of a sucker than the most naive country bumpkin.

The Todd story has echoes among his predecessors . . . Ziegfeld lived on a grand scale when he was making his name a synonym for that now senile word—glamor. Extravagances were the necessities of his life. He had the spending whims of a rajah. He gifted friends with bags of gold coins, hired private railroad cars for a 3-hour journey, spent $10,000 just for entertainment at a private party and erected a private zoo for the amusement of his daughter . . . The costs were never too high for his musical extravaganzas. He poured millions into his shows—and became a millionaire.

The Wall Street crash in '29 started the decline of the great showman's empire. Ziegfeld dropped over a million . . . When he attempted to recoup market losses with the show, "Smiles"—it flopped hard. That blow crushed his spirit. He was broken financially, physically and hounded by creditors.

Ironically, after he passed away the executors of his estate were offered a mint for the commercial rights to the name "Ziegfeld Follies"—the famed trade mark he couldn't find backers for in his final impoverished days.

The legendary "Follies," by the way, had its origin in Anna Held's suggestion to Ziegfeld that he produce a Parisian style revue . . . Harry B. Smith (who was hired to do the script) once had a colyum called "Follies of the Year." He used that title for the show. But F. Z. was superstitious. All the other shows Smith had penned for him had 13 letters in the title.

So it was called "Follies of 1907."

Our favorite Jed Harris paragraph happened in Hollywood . . . After making and squandering at least a million bux with "Broadway" (his first hit) and others, Harris' star started fading . . . He went to Movieburg. After waiting a long time to be asked, Jed finally decided to call on the studios . . . At MGM an exec said: "How much a week would you want?"

"How much," he glared, "does Louie B. Mayer get?"

Charles Frohman, Al Woods and Charles Dillingham were among the showman-kings who allowed millions to slip through their fingers . . . Frohman died a poor man. But several years before his demise, the producer scored his mightiest success with a performance by Maude Adams in Harvard Stadium before an audience of 20,000. Frohman donated the gross to Harvard U. for the building of the Germanic Museum.

Shortly after, a German torpedo caused Frohman's death—aboard the ill-fated "Lusitania."

Al Woods stashed away about a million in a safety deposit vault, but foolishly gave a duplicate key to a chum. When his friend was hit by the market dive—he helped himself to the cash without informing Woods.

After the producer learned of his loss, he called his sister-in-law and calmly announced: "I'm hungry. Looks like I'm going to be hungry for a long time. Why don't I come up for dinner tonight?"

When Dillingham was told "there's a lot of money in the theater," the showman shook his head sadly and murmured: "I know there's a lot of money in the theater—so much of it used to be mine."

Oscar Hammerstein I amassed and squandered several fortunes, producing operas and erecting opera houses . . . When things were rugged a friend asked Hammerstein: "How's business?"

Hammerstein intoned: "We're showing 'The Barber of Seville' and we can't even afford the lather!"

Then there's showman George White whose "Scandals of 1926" had the most expensive opening night in New York history—the face value of each ducat was $55 . . . Yet White's past clicks have left him with little more than glowing memories . . . Oddly enough, Earl Carroll never attained the B'way success of competitors Ziegfeld and White. But Carroll died a millionaire.

The greatest of them blundered . . . The all-time hit, "Broadway," was rejected by George M. Cohan, Al Woods and William Brady . . . "The Green Pastures" was ignored by well-known producers for years. This massive click was finally bankrolled by a Wall Streeter taking his initial fling in show biz . . . "Street Scene" was turned down by the Theater Guild, David Belasco, Arthur Hopkins, Jed Harris and Sam Harris . . . Al Woods declined to produce a play called "Marriage in Triplicate." It cost $5000 and earned over six million dollars under the title: "Abie's Irish Rose."

Not all B'way showmen are bankruptcy victims, of course. The Shuberts are zillionaires. One of their early goldmines was derived from Sarah Bernhardt's United States tour.

George M. Cohan was one of the town's most affluent showmen. His royalties on plays, sketches and songs one year were over a million. Cohan composed "Over There" in a half hour and made a fortune. When he was honored for writing the great war song, Cohan replied: "All I wrote was a bugle call."

Cohan once nutshelled the secret of his success: "My notion is that a guy who thinks he's the tops isn't going to do much climbing."

Rivalry was rife between Ziegfeld and Charles Frohman . . . Billie Burke was under contract to Frohman when she became Mrs. Ziegfeld. Frohman punished the lovely Billie by forcing her to go on 72 straight one-night stands.

Rodgers and Hammerstein are the current bonana boys. But it wasn't a cinch for Hammerstein. He was involved in a half-dozen flops before "Oklahoma!" hit pay dirt.

At any rate, Todd will go down on Broadway history for proving that It Is Easier to Owe a Million Than Make a Million.

Forest Firebug Suspected

SAN DIEGO, Calif., Oct. 16 (U.P.).—The fourth major forest fire in five days was out of control in San Diego County today and authorities said a single firebug may be responsible for all the blazes. More than 7000 acres have been blackened and eight mountain cabins destroyed.

Zoo Receives Outsize Green Chameleon

Dr. Mann's zoo was green with melleri yesterday.

The zoo director announced, to the envy of lizard collectors over the land, that he had received a "very large" chameleon, nearly a foot long, from South Central Africa, part of a shipment of five new additions to the reptile colony.

It's the only chameleon of its kind—melleri—at the zoo now, Dr. Mann said, a similar prize having died after arriving from the London zoo two years ago.

"It's bright green in the color at the moment," the doctor disclosed in his communique yesterday afternoon, "but it may be brown when you get here."

He said it came from a collector in Nyasaland. The species melleri is not the biggest chameleon known, because there is a bigger one on Madagascar called, appropriately, the "giant chameleon."

With surprising restraint, Dr. Mann said the newcomer is nothing sensational, "just a nice addition."

Keeping it company were two small lizards and two turtles, of which the zoo already has a bountiful supply.

Folsom Felt the Call Of Show Business

By Tex McCrary and Jinx Falkenburg

FRANK FOLSOM is our boss. He became president of the Radio Corporation of America at the stroke of midnight, December 31, 1948.

Folsom spent that New Year's Eve at home, not celebrating: "My emotions hit highs and lows that night—the same day I was told I was to become president of R.C.A., I was also told that one of my daughters was expected to die. Thank heavens, only one of those predictions came true . . ."

Folsom

Brilliant, imaginative, belligerently honest, Frank Folsom has been a merchant all his life. Born in the Pacific Northwest, he started as an elevator operator in the Lipman Wolfe Department Store, Portland, Oreg., at $30 a month. During lunch hours, he would gulp his food and go out on the floor to get his first early practice at the art he has mastered: selling.

"Mr. Folsom, can you remember any point in your early days when you had even a sneaking desire to get into show business?"

"Why yes: at night I worked as a prop man in a Portland theater. And I remember very clearly the first show I ever worked on—'The Pink Lady'—and to this day, my favorite song is 'The Pink Lady Waltz'."

BUT SHOW BUSINESS never becomes more than a sideshow for Frank Folsom: Selling was always the Big Top. Into salesmanship he packed all the art of a showman.

"There was an old man who was the head of my department in that store, after I worked my way out of the elevators, and every day, he'd come over to me and ask: 'How much have you sold off of this counter today?' He kept the pressure on, and gradually, I learned this one important thing: 'Put the most popular merchandise out on top of the counter.'

"That was the key to success for that particular counter—yet, the old man, my first boss, was impressed. And on a much greater scale, at R.C.A., we're applying that principle today—only we call it by a fancier name . . . 'Customer Preference Survey'."

Through department stores and Montgomery Ward's catalogue selling, Frank Folsom kept perfecting the sciences of mass selling, essential to mass production. When he took over at R.C.A., he said: "Gimme a gimmick, and we'll sell the whole line!"

FOR FOLSOM, the "gimmick" was television—the manufacture and sale of television sets now comprise 60 percent of R.C.A.'s business, in television, offspring N.B.C. has recaptured some laurels lost in radio to rival C.B.S.; and offspring R.C.A.-Victor's 45-rpm records and players are meeting the challenge of Columbia Recording's Long-Playing scoop.

No matter whose talent looks from now on, some member of Folsom's family of devices provides a vital outlet and audience.

Mrs. Roosevelt joined his team this week on WNBC, and even Irving Berlin and Ethel Merman have found their chief angel this past week at 30 Rockefeller Plaza—nerve center of R.C.A., where Frank Folsom's office adjoins David Sarnoff's, three floors below the office of John D. Rockefeller, jr.

The DISTRICT LINE by Bill Gold

His Wife Is Still Waiting For the Coat

H. A. Willard of 1416 F st. nw. weighs in with a true story about a local "improver of the breed" who likes to bet on the horses

He was combing his hair one morning last week when he accidentally upset a bottle of hair tonic. "Hey," he said to his missus, "maybe this is a hunch. There's a horse called Skin Tonic in the 7th at Belmont today."

"You've bet on a jillion hunches that never worked up a good sweat," sneered his wife. "Besides, I need a new fall coat."

Obviously, no true horse-player will fritter his betting money away on such nonsense as a down-payment on a coat for the old lady. No sir. Instead, our hero rushed out to plunk five bucks on Skin Tonic's nose.

I hate to end this item with the factual report that Skin Tonic won and paid $423.60 for each $2 ticket, because that just ruins all chance to preach a sermon on the evils of gambling.

I guess if there's a moral to the story it's simply this: If you must bet on horses, bet on the winners only.

MISCELLANY

The displaced person who hungered for a piano now has one, thanks to the generosity of a District Liner who doesn't want her name mentioned . . . Pvt. Ray Taylor, who made countless friends while running the 14th and Pennsylvania corner, is currently untangling traffic at 14th and New York and making scores of new boosters for the Police Department . . . Andy F. Kisacky wants to know "since when do they credit an extra first down if a touchdown run goes for 10 yards or more?" Sports Editor Bus Ham advises "Since this season. It's one of the new changes in the rules" . . . Regarding those 10 steps for getting a fellow to propose, Mrs. E. Cerin of 5405 9th st. nw. observes: "Any man who can be brought to marriage by nine mentions of a 'ring' deserves to have one slipped through his nose so that he can be led around by it for the rest of his life" . . . I guess she means if we're dumb enough to get caught, we have nobody to blame but ourselves . . . My item about tips and tipping moves Chet Collison of 1371 Rittenhouse st. nw. to ask: "Do the etiquette authorities suggest that if the price of a meal goes up tenfold we should tip 10 times 10 percent?" . . . Mrs. Mary D. Harris of 232 7th st. ne. has a good word for the courtesy of Capital Transit operator 1416. The records list him as D. E. Mevling of 1004 Pennsylvania ave. se. . . . Mrs. Jules Fiedler of 54 West st., Annapolis, Md., suggests that if you're looking for a nice drive this Sunday, you're invited to attend the all-breed dog show being held by Annapolis Kennel Club on the campus of historic St. John's College . . . Michael Dillion of 900 Longfellow st. nw. has a cat that just loves "Cartoon Theater" on WTTG each Saturday; but he's no true TV fan—other programs leave him cold . . . Grace Stuart of 4301 Halley ter. se. says she'd love to comply with Capital Transit's advertised slogan: "Enjoy a Relaxing Ride," but she can't figure out how to do it while hanging on to a strap with other passengers standing on her feet . . . Mary E. Van Cleave of 7019 Georgia ave. nw. wonders whether she can offer her head cold as a Give-Away item.

MAIL BAG

Dear Bill:

WTOP'S Gene Klavan has a right to have his name spelled right. It's not "Klaven" as you had it recently.

Mrs. Mollie Caplan,
1007 Sligo pkwy.,
Takoma, Park, Md.

Dear Mrs. Caplan:

When I was writing the item, I called up Gene and asked, "You spell it 'K-l-a-v-a-n,' don't you?"

"You're a great man," Gene assured me. "Anybody who takes the trouble to spell my name right is a great man."

So I carefully spelled it "Klavan," the compositor set it that way, and that's the way it came up on the galley proof.

Now if you'll tell me how the "a" got changed to an "e" by the time the paper reached my breakfast table that morning, I'll be much obliged to you. Gremlins, maybe?

Bill

BUSINESSMAN

I am currently hip-deep in old correspondence, having spent the past week at the seemingly endless task of cleaning out my files in preparation for our move to the new Washington Post building.

This past weekend, my 14-year-old relative offered to come downtown to help. "You wouldn't have to pay me much," he pointed out. "I'm just half a man, so pay me half the minimum wage."

"That would be half of 75 cents an hour," I mused.

He considered the offer for a moment, then shook his head. "I'm not that good at fractions. Make it an even 50 cents, so I won't have to spend more time figuring my wages than working."

CONCERT

I love the listening faces.
How they seem
To blend the measured beauty
With their dream,
One with the music now,
Yet worlds apart;
Each at the lonely concert
In his heart.

Mary Ellen.

TELL HIM I'M NOT AT HOME! TELL HIM I'VE GONE TO ALASKA!
I SHOULDN'T HAVE SAID THAT. IT'S NOT THE TRUTH AND I MADE MYRTLE TELL A DELIBERATE FALSEHOOD!
NO, YOU DIDN'T! I KNEW IT WASN'T TRUE, SO I MADE SAMPSON SAY IT!

I'LL LET SAMPSON'S FATHER WORRY ABOUT SAMPSON!

Influence Of Mafia Cuts State Lines

By Drew Pearson

Here is a continuation of the roll call of Mafia leaders, the most secret list of criminals in the United States:

Anthony Accardo, River Forest, Ill., and Surfside, Fla. Al Capone's heir, and probably the most influential member of the Mafia in the Chicago area. His activities seem to be confined almost exclusively to gambling, and he calls himself a "betting commissioner." He threatened James Ragen before Ragen was bumped off June 24, 1946, and when the Capone syndicate moved in on the Continental Racing Wire. Tony Accardo was tried in November, 1948, for conspiracy to defraud and for concealing material facts, but not convicted. He is now ducking the Kefauver committee.

Charles Fischetti, Chicago, and Miami, Fla.—One of the most powerful figures in the underworld. has connections with every important mob on the East Coast; is equally prominent with Tony Accardo in the Mafia, and is also ducking the Kefauver committee. Charles and Rocco Fischetti, cousins of the late Al Capone, loaned $300,000 for the building of the late Bugsy Siegel's Flamingo Hotel in Las Vegas.

Louis Campagna, alias "Little New Yorker," Chicago.—Is a leading figure in the Mafia and the Capone gang; one of the notorious Capone convicts, jailed in 1945 for extorting millions of dollars from the movie industry, then released on parole. Campagna was also sentenced in Chicago for bank robbery, back in 1919.

Philip D'Andrea, Chicago.—Another of the Capone parolees who was jailed in the 1945 movie extortion case. Once a bodyguard for Al Capone, D'Andrea now spends most of his time at Tarzana, Calif., but is still influential in the Mafia in Chicago.

Charles Gioe, alias "Cherry Nose," Chicago.—Another of the Capone convicts, now out on parole following the movie extortion case. Only recently, Gioe changed his last name legally to Joye.

Rocco de Grazio, alias "Gramps," Melrose Park, Ill.—A prominent Mafia member and Capone mobster in the Chicago area. He was investigated in connection with the Kansas City Mafia killing of the 11-year-old Carramusa boy. De Grazio got 18 months for violating the income-tax laws in 1935.

Paul De Lucia, alias Paul Ricca, alias Paul "The Waiter," River Forest, Ill., and Berrien Springs, Mich.—A member of the grand council of the international Mafia. He started out as a waiter, is now a multi-millionaire, is close to the Fischetti brothers; known to be a backer of gambling houses. He also was sentenced, then paroled in the Brown-Bioff movie extortion case.

Anthony Capezio, alias "Tough Tony," Chicago — An important Mafia henchman in the Chicago area. His name has been linked with narcotics cases, but he has never been arrested. He was also investigated in connection with the Carramusa killing. In Chicago, Capezio is known as the boss of Grand and Western aves.

Ralph Capone, alias "Bottles," Mercer, Wis.—His influence in the Mafia and the underworld is chiefly a matter of prestige as the late Al Capone's brother. Ralph still has his finger in underworld enterprises, however, and operates the Rex Hotel and Billy's Bar in Mercer.

Ray Patriaca, Providence, R. I.—King of the rackets in Rhode Island and surrounding territory; known to be associated with Frank Costella. In 1940, Daniel H. Coakley, a member of the Massachusetts Governor's council, was impeached for obtaining Patriaca's release from Massachusetts State Prison.

Frank Iacone. Worcester, Mass.—Closely associated with Patriaca, in New England rackets. After Patriaca was released from prison, Iacone delivered an ultimatum to Patriaca to stay out of Worcester. This was followed by a series of robberies on Iacone's enterprises, after which Iacone and Patriaca patched up their differences. They worked together as rum-runners back in prohibition days, then Iacone started "bean" games and graduated into big-time gambling.

Jack Dragna, real name is Antonio Rizzotti, Los Angeles.—Boss of the Mafia on the West Coast; operated the Universal Sports News, which distributed racing news in California and parts of Nevada, received $500 weekly from the Illinois Sports News, Chicago, until exposed. Dragna is mixed up with just about every important mobster in the underworld, was once arrested with Charles Fischetti, has his finger in West Coast rackets, including the labor rackets in which he is asciated with John Rosselli, another of the movie extortion parolees. Dragna's headquarters is reported to be the Savoy Shirt Shop, operated by Joe and Freddie Sica. Dragna was arrested for attempted extortion July 6, 1910; sentenced to 3 years for felony January 26, 1916; arrested as a murder suspect, May 25, 1916; arrested as a robbery suspect, July 29, 1930; picked up on suspicion of robbery, December 6, 1946.

Eugene Smaldone, Denver, Colo.—Is the Mafia power in the Rocky Mountain area. His Smaldone gang dominates the rackets in northern Colorado. Its principal enforcer is Frank "Blackie" Mazza.

Pete Licovali, Grosse Pointe Park, Mich., and Tucson, Ariz.—Boss of the Michigan Mafia until he moved to his Grace Ranch near Tucson. However, he still has a finger in the Detroit rackets. Licovali was sentenced to 2 years on June 21, 1933, for attempting to bribe a customs officer in connection with a liquor case.
